U.S. Labor Board Moves to Block Textile Walkout

Garrison Asks Leaders of Workers to Parley Tomorrow.

Speed Emphasized As a Necessity

Gorman Says Alabama Mills Are Arming Against Strike.

Intervention by the National Labor Relations Board in an eleventh-hour move to block a strike of some 600,000 textile workers planned for September 4 was announced last night.

Officials of both the American Cotton Textile Institute and the United Textile Workers were invited by Lloyd Garrison, labor board chairman, to consider peace terms at a conference here tomorrow or Thursday. Other developments included:

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, charged that Alabama mills had been fortified with machine guns, dynamite, pistols and tear-gas in preparation against the walk-out.

Unionists prepared to call out silk, rayon and woolen workers simultaneously with the cotton textile strike.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal emergency relief administrator, announced that his organization would not feed the participants should Secretary Perkins or the labor board rule the strike unjustified.

Settlement of the aluminum strike will be considered today at a meeting sponsored by the labor board.

Gorman, diminutive generalissimo of the union forces, clipped his words ominously as he discussed the "arming" by Alabama mill owners. He predicted the only disorders would be those "provoked by the employers."

Garrison Asks Speed.

Garrison made public a telegram to George A. Sloan, Cotton Textile Institute president, in which he emphasized the need for speed in the negotiations.

"Following our conference with the Cotton Textile National Industrial Relations Board, the code authority and NRA officials and subsequent conferences with representatives of the United Textile Workers," Garrison telegraphed Sloan, "we are hopeful that some headway might be made toward a settlement of the issues involved in the pending strike by a round-table conference in which a representative committee of the Cotton Textile Institute and the members of the cotton textile board and representatives of the union would discuss with us the issues and explore the possibilities of arriving at some settlement.

"If any action is to be taken it should be taken speedily and we accordingly urge you to communicate immediately with such members of the institute as you think would be representative. * * *

"You will appreciate that we have no desire by this action to do more than bring together a representative group of employers and the cotton textile board and the

As Strike Nears

The National Labor Relations Board announced last night it would seek to mediate the threatened strike of 600,000 textile workers.

Striking employes of the Aluminum Company of America and company representatives conferred yesterday on a basis for ending the walk-out. Negotiations were to continue today.

Vigilantes, composed of non-striking onion weeders, kept watch last night over the Scioto marshland near McGuffy, Ohio, pledged to retaliate in the event of further violence as efforts were made to bring the strike to an end.

One man was injured in a clash yesterday between non-union workers and strikers at the Atlantic Cotton Mills in Macon, Ga. After the battle the plant was shut down.

Railways Ask $170,000,000 Rate Increase

Appeal to I. C. C. Seen as Forcing Government to Aid Carriers.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Application to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by the Class I railroads for freight rate increases estimated to yield $170,000,000 additional revenue annually, was regarded as placing squarely before the Roosevelt Administration the necessity of adopting a program to relieve the plight of those carriers.

Although long contemplating and preparing for such a step, the railroads undertook to force the issue on the heels of the editorial last week by Raymond Moley, in the magazine Today, conceding the carriers had a just complaint against the Roosevelt Administration. Mr. Moley probably is as close to the President as any man.

It will necessarily be some weeks before the Interstate Commerce Commission can take up the petition of the railroads, hold hearings and arrive at a determination of the merits of their case. Meanwhile the Administration will have an opportunity to work out some solution for the vexatious railroad problem, if it objects to a boost in freight rates which will add generally to the cost of living.

An important aspect of the situation concerning the Administration is whether the railroads will be any better off under the increased freight rates then they are now because of competing lines of unregulated transportation, such as trucks and waterways.

In their petition, the railroads contended they took this factor into consideration and selected the commodities and zones on which the increased rates would apply with an eye to the competing forms of transportation. Nevertheless the possibility exists, it was pointed out here, that increased rates may mean a decrease in business for the rail carriers.

If the Administration does not believe that increased rates is the proper approach to solution of the railroad problem, it may push for-

4,700 Autoists Face Tag Trap

Must Surrender and Post $5 or D. C. Police Will Refuse Licenses.

Approximately 4,700 Washington motorists are facing arrest, and unless they are arrested or surrender at Police Headquarters, they will be unable to obtain 1935 automobile license plates.

Sergt. Walter H. Thomas, Traffic Bureau records chief, revealed yesterday that members of his command hold nearly 5,000 unserved warrants for traffic violations. A minimum collateral of $5 must be posted on each warrant before the named violator can obtain his new license tags.

"This is the only way we can apprehend those motorists who have warrants against them," Sergt. Thomas declared. "We have been unable to serve these warrants and a policeman has been detailed to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic to stop issuance of all licenses plates where the applicant faces arrest on a warrant."

He added that when the required collateral is posted, the motorist is free to apply for tags. The system was indorsed by Inspector B. A. Lamb, commanding the Traffic Bureau, and has the approval of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

In many cases where warrants are returned to headquarters unserved, it was found the motorist had changed his or her address without notifying police. In such cases, Sergt. Thomas declared, the motorist will face additional charges of failing to give notification of a new address.

The majority of warrants are for minor parking violations.

Scottsboro Defendants Lose Hearing Pleas

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 27 (AP).—Alabama's Supreme Court today declined to call a special session to rule on the application for a rehearing of its decision affirming the death sentences of Haywood Patterson and Clarence Norris, colored defendants in the Scottsboro case.

The special session was requested by defense counsel and Attorney General Thomas E. Knight, jr., to obtain an early ruling and if the rehearing is denied, speed up the final appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Texans Flee As Hurricane Sweeps Gulf

Patients Are Moved; Tides Rise; Louisiana Also Warned.

Houston, Tex., Aug. 27 (AP).—Winds of hurricane force were believed by the Weather Bureau to be headed tonight for the vicinity of Freeport, sulphur shipping harbor, 50 miles southwest of Galveston, where rehabilitation work still was under way in the area lashed a month ago by a hurricane.

High winds and tides buffeted the coast in the vicinity of Galveston and hurricane-wise coast residents already apprehensive, were warned to be ready to act quickly.

An advisory report from Washington pointed out that "the rate of advance of the tropical disturbance has decreased decidedly. Such a slowing up is almost always followed by unusual movements.

"Accordingly, persons in exposed places in east Texas and western Louisiana coastal areas should await further advices tonight and be prepared to act quickly."

Hospital Evacuated.

Patients in the Freeport Hospital were moved 45 miles northward to Houston as a precautionary measure.

Winds and tides accompanying the July hurricane killed 11 persons and caused property damage estimated at more than $1,000,000 in the Freeport area.

The low coastal plain of that region is only a few feet above sea level and during the July storm a tidal wave swept several miles inland. Virtually all Texas coastal cities are protected by sea walls, but in the event of a high tide, such as that in July, which reached a height of seven or eight feet at some points, the low dykes offer scant protection.

The barometer stood at 29.74 at Galveston at 7 p. m., Central standard time. This was unchanged from the reading of the previous hour, but the east wind had dropped in velocity to 32 miles an hour. The barometer had risen 9 points in six hours. Rainfall there today totaled 2.65 inches.

The barometer at the Coast Guard station at Freeport dropped to 29.86 tonight and the wind increased to an estimated 65 to 70 miles an hour. A low barometer and strong gale likewise were reported from San Luis Pass, on the west end of Galveston Island.

Buildings Boarded Up.

Many of the Freeport residents left for the interior in the afternoon. Stores and public buildings were closed and residences were boarded up.

Torrential rains continued to drench the coastal region and the wind reached a velocity of 65 miles an hour at Port Bolivar, across Galveston Bay from the City of Galveston. Rising tides rolled toward the coast, but observers said they were not so high as the tides in the July storm.

Warned of the approaching disturbance, summer colonists hastily evacuated beach resorts and residents of low-lying, unprotected towns moved to higher ground.

Mop Mill Closed After Strike Row

Owner Seeks to Halt Bloodshed at Macon.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 27 (AP).—The mop department of the Atlantic Cotton Mills was closed down today after a clash between strikers and non-union workers in which one man was wounded and several persons stripped of their clothing.

Officers said the trouble started when the nonunion workers were brought to the mill by truck and attempted to enter the mop department in the presence of a crowd of approximately 500 strike sympathizers.

"I would rather close the mop department down than have anyone killed," George W. McCommon, mill president, said. In previous statements McCommon had said he was going out of business.

Byrns, Back, Pledges 'Modernized' House

REPRESENTATIVE BYRNS.

By Robert C. Albright.

Thoroughgoing revision of antiquated House rules, including repeal of the now famous "145 rule," which smothered the last House in petitions and threatened the Administration with a prolonged filibuster, yesterday was pledged by House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns.

Taking up active direction of the fall Democratic Congressional campaign and his own private cudgels in the race for the Speakership, the veteran House leader returned to the Capitol yesterday, to remain on the Washington scene until the eve of elections.

Independents To Boost Gas; Peace Sighted

Major Companies See End of Cut War Tomorrow or Thursday.

The end of Washington's gasoline price war was signaled yesterday when one of the independent dealers, who has been retailing the product at 10 cents a gallon, said he would go up to 15.8 cents tomorrow and representatives of major companies admitted the "war" would end tomorrow or Thursday.

That the price-cutting campaign, which has dealt heavy losses, especially to the smaller filling stations, will be over within 48 hours, was held virtually certain, although strict silence surrounded a meeting of the District of Columbia petroleum committee yesterday.

"The situation with respect to the present gasoline war remains unchanged," said G. W. Boyer, committee secretary, in a formal statement following the meeting, "and the gasoline suppliers are standing by awaiting certain negotiations of the unbranded dealers within their own group. No change in the present price is anticipated within the next 48 hours."

Price Rise Due Tomorrow.

Irvin Abrams, representing the Speedy Gas & Oil Co., declared, however, that the four filling stations which it controls would restore the 15.8 cents scale at 4 p. m. tomorrow, possibly a few hours sooner. Also, officials of two of the major companies admitted the "war" would end tomorrow or Thursday,

Thousands See Cadets March For President

West Point Is Paid First Visit by Executive Since Harding.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Always regarded as a "good Navy man," President Roosevelt today turned his attention to the Army, reviewing the cadets of West Point in a colorful ceremony that marked the first visit of a Chief Executive to the academy since President Harding.

Out for a full day's recreation, Mr. Roosevelt made a circular sweep of the surrounding countryside, riding in the back seat of an open touring car. He visited a model New York prison and lunched in picnic fashion at a boys' reformatory before turning in at West Point to receive Presidential honors.

So abruptly was the visit planned that Col. Edwin M. Watson, the White House military aid, had to hasten here from vacation to be on hand for the ceremony. Apparently the President, whose keen interest in the Navy has warmed the hearts of the admirals, was glad of the chance to evidence his pride in the Army, too.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, the President was met at West Point's south gate by Maj. William D. Connor, superintendent of the academy, and a Cavalry escort. Slowly he rode by the ranks of cadets, marshaled at present arms in front of the gray stone barracks, while a Field Artillery detachment

Ickes Urges Oil Curb, Assailed by Head of Producers.

Lawyers Warned of Growing Encroachment on State Rights.

Titusville, Pa., Aug. 27 (AP).—Thirty thousand persons gathered at the birthplace of one of the Nation's major industries today and heard a Federal administrator and a high petroleum official express sharply contrasting views of the effectiveness of the New Deal in the oil industry.

Harold L. Ickes, petroleum administrator and Secretary of the Interior, referred to what he termed "the partnership" between the Government and "the overwhelming majority of the petroleum industry," and declared:

"It was inevitable that the strong hand of the Government, sooner or later, would have to restore order in an industry that, during its more turbulent years, violently resented the intervention of the Government."

Axtell J. Byles, president of the American Petroleum Institute, suggesting "the hand of Government" be lifted from the industry, said:

"Some of us do not believe in fairies or panaceas or economic

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 27 (AP).—Government competition in the utilities field and asserted Government encroachment on States rights were assailed today in sectional meetings which preceded opening of the American Bar Association's annual convention.

William A. Schnader, attorney general of Pennsylvania and Republican candidate for Governor, urged the States to "fight for their rights and protect themselves" from "Federal encroachments of State sovereignty."

Diplomats Wait Woman Flier "Lost" as Gas Supply Fails

A four-and-a-half-hour search for Mme. Hermelinda U. de Briones, poineer South American woman pilot, who yesterday began a good-will flight from New York to Washington, was ended last night with word that she had landed at Baltimore Municipal Airport.

The woman flier, for whom a distinguished group of 25 Latin-American diplomats had waited at Washington Airport since noon yesterday, was delayed by failure of her gas supply which forced her to land at Chestertown, Md.

Resuming the flight, she flew to Baltimore, replenished the empty tanks and again took off for Washington. But as it had become dark meanwhile, the woman flier turned back a few miles out of Baltimore and decided to stay there for the night.

She planned, the diplomats were informed over the telephone, to arrive here early today.

Search had extended over a wide area in five States throughout the afternoon when she failed to land here on schedule and Commerce Department airway officials reported no one had sighted her plane.

Mme. Briones, a native of Abata, Ecuador, was coming here as a gesture of good will toward Capt. Colon Eloy Alfara, Minister of Ecuador, to whom she bore greetings of the Union de Mugeres Americanas. It was her first long-distance solo flight. She plans later to fly to South America on a similar good-will tour.

The woman pilot has lived in New York for the past six years.

Senate Links Arms Makers And Zaharoff

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Agents of the Senate's special Munitions Investigating Committee were reported reliably yesterday to have found a link between Sir Basil Zaharoff, Europe's mystery man, and United States war material manufacturers.

Letters from the enormously wealthy European, about whom little is known but who sometimes is called a "maker and breaker of kings," has been found in the files of some of the leading munitions manufacturers in this country.

The subject will be aired probably soon after the opening of hearings here a week from today. Summons already have been served on around a dozen representatives of the industry to give testimony on various lines.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, the only member of the committee now in the Capital, refused to affirm or deny the Zaharoff reports. He admitted, however, that the committee's investigators had found international connections between some manufacturers in this country and large firms of other nations.

Japan Probe Slated.

The Idahoan declined to enlarge on this statement, saying he could not disclose work accomplished during the past few months until public hearings open.

A new angle in the investigation was seen in a prediction by Pope that the committee probably would look into the shipment of scrap iron from the United States to Japan. A report of the Department of Commerce today disclosed that 101,293 tons of the total July exportation of 155,812 tons of scrap iron had gone to the Oriental nation.

It is generally thought in this country that at least part of such scrap iron is used by Japan for the manufacture of munitions and other armaments. Pope told newsmen yesterday the committee probably would attempt to uncover just how these transactions are made. For years Japan has been the United States' best customer for such materials.

The investigators' reports concerning Sir Basil and his activities in connection with United States manufacturers is expected to be brought out early in the hearings inasmuch as the subject of munitions and armaments exports is scheduled early in the session.

Sir Basil, a Greek, who became a subject of Great Britain and later was knighted for service to that country, came into prominence several years ago in connection with the munitions traffic.

Zaharoff is generally supposed to have some connection with the Maxim Co. of Vienna and with Vickers & Armstrong in England. Each is one of the largest munitions concerns in its country.

Sir Basil has been mentioned in print as having been behind the downfall of a Balkan monarchy and the establishment of a president in office who was willing to "do business with him" on contracts for war material.

Chicago Teachers Paid $26,000,000; Stores Will Profit

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—The wolf which had lived at the door so long he seemed like one of the family was shooed away from the Chicago school teachers today with $26,000,000.

As fast as they could march up to special pay windows, the teachers were paid in full—for the first time in seven months. Checks ranging from $892 to $3,391 put them on a cash basis and back in the market as consumers.

It was estimated that when all were paid, it would give Chicago business $100,000,000 worth of action, on the theory that every dollar will be used at least five times.

The pay day, insured when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loaned the school board some $22,000,000, placed 17,000 board of education employes back in the retail market.

Doctors Operate on Sick Boy As Cult Prays in Nearby Room

Fort Payne, Ala., Aug. 27 (AP).—An operation was performed late today on Wallace Doyle Sharp, jr., 8-year-old son of parents who had previously refused to allow physicians to attend him because they believed he could be "healed by the Lord through prayer."

The operation was performed by the light of an oil lamp by Dr. A. W. Ralls, Gadsden, Ala., surgeon, with Dr. W. T. Miller, local physician, administering the anesthetic.

Dr. Ralls said the child's chances of life "are good unless his constitution has been weakened too much by the infection in his leg."

Little "W. D.," as he is known to his playmates, had suffered from an infected leg for two weeks, and Saturday, after authorities had ordered that he be given medical attention, he was spirited away to Dutton, in Jackson County, so that the "faith cure" would have a chance to be completed.

He was brought back Sunday, after his father and two other members of the Holiness sect here had been arrested for "interfering with officers" and placed under $500 bond each.

As the surgeon worked on the lad today, in an upstairs room of his parents' home, members of the sect gathered in an adjoining bedroom and, led by the boy's mother, prayed for his recovery and talked in the "unknown tongue," a part of their religious ceremonies.

Dr. Ralls said he did not believe an amputation, which had been feared, would be necessary.

NRA Cuts Costs, Reducing Codes; Johnson to Stay

On the NRA Front

NRA regrouped American industry into 22 classes to cut administration costs, eliminate overlapping of codes and simplify procedure.

Gen. Johnson, after resigning as NRA head last week, agreed to continue as chief at the President's request, indicating a victory for him over Donald R. Richberg and Secretary Perkins in revamping plans.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National committee, assailed Richberg's first report on National progress under the NRA, charging that every industry has declined under the recovery administration.

Richberg is drafting a second report, expected tomorrow, to supplant his claims of greatly increased industrial employment and pay rolls under the NRA.

First Long Stride Taken by Dividing Industry Into 22 Classes.

Plan Worked Out By Economic Unit

250 Pacts Eventually Is Aim Instead of Present 862.

The NRA took its first long stride last night toward obtaining more efficient and economical code administration by dividing American industry into 22 classes in a complete realignment of code groupings.

The plan was recommended by a specially created economic unit and corresponds closely to the groupings of the Census Bureau and of the international classification.

At the same time, the NRA disclosed that the eventual expectation is that the 22 sections will fit into 10 or 11 industry divisions.

Division Outlined.

In a lengthy outline of the new development issued tonight, the NRA said the classification was based on recognition of four basic groups of enterprises:

1—Production of basic materials from the soil.
2—Fabrication of what emerges from the first group into finished products.
3—Service—industries which do not produce or fabricate definite products, but which render service—ranging from transportation through finance to amusements, professions and such service-trades as laundries, restaurants, &c.
4—Distribution of goods, wholesale and retail.

The 22 sections and the fundamental groups to which they belong are:

Producing industries: food, textiles, leather and fur, ferrous metals, nonferrous metals, nonmetallic products, fuel, lumber, chemicals, paints and drugs, paper and rubber.

Fabricating industries: equipment, manufacturing, graphic arts, construction.

Service Industries.

Service industries: Public utilities, transportation, communication, finance and amusements.

Distributing trades: Professions and services, wholesale and retail trades.

The probable line-up of industry divisions was announced as follows:

1. Food, farm products.
2. Textiles, furs, leather.
3. Basic materials, steel, lumber, building materials, fuels.
4. Chemicals, drugs, paints, paper, rubber.
5. Equipment, machinery, tools, fixtures, vehicles.
6. Manufacturing of use goods—from household appliances to musical instruments.
7. Construction in all branches.
8. Public utilities (electric, gas, water) transportation.
9. Finance, graphic arts, amusements.
10. Professional, service trades, all wholesale and retail codes (except food).

Because of the relationship between food codes and the AAA programs, the first division is vertical from first manufacture through retail sale, the NRA stated.

Coordinating machinery will be established for uniform trade policies between divisions one and ten, and, if later found desirable, the food distribution codes may readily be grouped with other distributing trade groups.

The NRA emphasized it was not proposed that industries consolidate their codes into the 22 master classi-

Johnson Out And In Again As NRA Head

(Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.)

A complete tactical victory for Hugh S. Johnson, leaving him the undisputed boss at NRA, is the outcome of an intense, personal wrangle with Secretary Perkins and Donald Richberg over plans for reorganizing the Blue Eagle agency.

So deeply did the controversy run, it was learned yesterday, that the blustery general stormed out of a White House conference charging efforts to oust him. He later resigned in writing, only to reconsider at the earnest persuasion of President Roosevelt.

All this happened last week, creating a situation that caused Mr. Roosevelt to return to Washington after Speaker Rainey's funeral in Illinois and seek to resolve the quarrel instead of going directly to Hyde Park, as he had planned.

As the situation shapes up today the following results predominate:

Johnson will remain as National recovery administrator and very likely will head the board which later is to take charge of NRA.

Richberg will continue, for the time being at least, as NRA counsel, with an understanding that Johnson is the chief of that agency. Later he probably will be given a key post in the recovery campaign, perhaps that of head of the National Emergency Council.

Miss Perkins in the future probably will confine her work more closely to her own department.

In other words, President Roosevelt, with a profound admiration for both Miss Perkins and Richberg—a respect not in the least affected by the events of the last week—has worked out a plan which will keep them from stepping on the sensitive toes of the impetuous general.

Richberg was made executive secretary of the emergency council several months ago, although retaining his post as NRA counsel. Frank Walker, head of the council, has been away from Washington throughout the summer, with Richberg in active charge.

It is planned that Walker will return in the fall, but it is under-

NRA Orders Fewer Codes, Lower Costs

First Steps Are Taken to Cut 682 Pacts to Only 250.

fication, but the whole plan is based on natural definitions of industries and trades as written by the industry and trade group thereunder.

The reasons for the changes were given as:

1. Assurance that allied lines receive identical treatment on common functions and studies.
2. Reduced administration overhead by eliminating duplication of functions and studies.
3. Opportunity for many allied codes to merge by voluntary action of industry for greater economy in the self-government function.
4. Cleared perspective on the several classes of codes to eliminate overlapping definitions in the codes.
5. Simplicity of line-up for more accurate statistics on industries and trades.

Through this realignment the NRA expects ultimately to have only 250 codes throughout industry instead of the 682 at present. Studies of code expense to industry now are being made in NRA and by outside agencies, it was stated, to reach the minimum consistent with effective administration.

Preliminary indications, the statement said, are that there is "room for a very marked overhead reduction."

Gas Independents To Boost Prices

with their prices returning to the old level of 16.8 cents for straight gasoline and 18.8 cents for high test.

Formal announcement by the local petroleum code committee that a settlement has been reached was withheld, it is believed, pending a joint meeting here today with representatives of the Virginia and Maryland petroleum industries committees.

The session will open at 10 a. m. and its subject will be the District's two-week-old price-cutting war which has had repercussions in both adjoining States. One of the evils under attack is the practice of bootlegging motor fuel from Washington into Maryland and Virginia and reaping illegal profits made possible by the higher taxes in those jurisdictions. There the combined Federal and State levy is 5 cents. Here it is 3 cents.

Discounts Started War.

C. F. Joyner, assistant director, will represent the Virginia division of motor vehicles. E. A. Eyhn will represent the Virginia code committee.

Prior to the outbreak of the price war here August 15, straight gasoline was being sold for 16.8 cents, tax included, by the major companies and independent-branded dealers. Independents handling so-called third-grade gasoline were retailing their product for 15.8 cents, a 1-cent reduction agreed upon several months ago.

The price-slashing war had its inception when some of the 16.8 sellers allegedly gave discounts to large buyers, bringing the price down below that charged by the third-grade dealers. Since it began sales have increased 100 per cent at some of the dime stations, with many patrons taking the fuel away in cans to be stored.

Marlboro Fair To Open Today

Seven Running Events on Each Day to Feature Annual Exhibit.

The Upper Marlboro Fair will open today with agricultural exhibit entries far below expectations, according to reports issued yesterday from the executive offices at the fair grounds.

Officials of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair Association, sponsors of the annual Prince Georges County event, however, spoke encouragingly of the expected attendance, indicating a record is expected.

In addition to the exhibits, which will include the awarding of prizes for all forms of produce, poultry, horses, cattle and home-made articles, the fair will offer seven running events each day.

Mr. Marsteller has been connected with the Fauquier National Bank for 18 years and for the past 5 years has been cashier of the institution. His successor as cashier has not yet been named.

tion's program through the last turbulent House, chatted blithely with reporters about Democratic chances at the polls and his own aspirations to wield the House gavel.

"Every so often it is a good thing to overhaul the rules of any parliamentary body," he told press men. "And there are a number of House rules that need amending. Some of them are a little antiquated. We don't want to deprive anybody of their rights, but if we are going to keep on doing business there's going to be some revision."

The Democratic floor leader disclosed that a House Rules sub-committee already is at work on necessary changes in the rules, but probably will withhold its report until January.

"145" Rule Embarrassing.

Both Byrns and Speaker Rainey favored revision of the "145" rule at the start of last session, but the issue was never put to a vote. Minority sponsors of more than a score of bills took advantage of its liberal terms to circulate petitions on legislation, many of them embarrassing to the leadership.

At one time, signers of petitions on such anti-Administration measures as the McLeod bank pay-off bill and the Frazier inflation bill formed an alliance which threatened to stalemate the House in indefinite filibuster.

"I don't know what the Rules Committee is going to report, but if I have my way the rule will be changed to require 218 signatures on a petition to force a vote, instead of 145," Representative Byrns commented.

Insisting his return to Washington was prompted by his duties as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, rather than any irons he has in the Speakership fire, the Tennessee Democrat forecast little change in the political make-up of the House.

Expects Calm in Next House.

He scoffed at suggestions that the next House is going to be even more troublesome to handle than the last.

"A preponderance of those elected, whether Republicans or Democrats, are going to be interested in rounding out the recovery program already started; not in putting stones in the path of the Administration. I don't look for much trouble."

As to program, the floor leader indicated he will look to the White House for guidance. He predicted the President's social legislation proposals, embodying unemployment insurance and old-age pensions, now the subject of a special Administration study, will be well to the fore.

Minimizes Liberty League.

Leader Byrns professed lack of information about the new American Liberty League, but said in his opinion it will not be a force in the coming campaign.

"I have heard they are a little conservative," he grinned. Both Byrns and Rainey prided themselves on their "liberal" leadership of the last House.

The leading Speakership aspirant had no comment to make on the three rival candidacies for the House rostrum announced by Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas; William Bankhead, of Alabama, and John Rankin, of Tennessee.

He had little more to say about his own candidacy, reiterating simply that he is "in line" for the job.

Gale, Tides Lash Texas Gulf Coast of the Galveston News and Tribune, reported that the wind was high during the afternoon, but that residents of the city, protected by a massive sea wall of granite, were not panicky.

Power lines of the Galveston-Houston Electric Co. went out of service at 11:05 a. m. and the interurban was stalled at the mainland end of the causeway.

The wind uprooted small trees in the Galveston residential section.

A Coast Guard patrol boat went to the aid of a dredge crew of 16 men tied up in the ferry channel in the Bolivar road. The men were removed as a precautionary measure because of the dredge being in danger from high tides and wind.

Fliers from the Third Attack Group at Fort Crockett, Army Air Field on Galveston Island, joined other agencies in spreading the warning along the coast west of Galveston.

Up the coast at High Island many persons departed for the mainland. Early in the morning the tide went out at High Island, beaching small craft. Later it returned and covered, in places, the road linking the island with the main land.

Mrs. Rainey Refuses To Seek House Seat

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 27 (AP).—Formal announcement was made today that Mrs. Henry T. Rainey would not be a candidate to succeed the late Speaker of the House as Representative from the Twentieth Illinois District.

Senator William H. Dieterich, who conferred with Mrs. Rainey at her Carrollton home yesterday, issued a statement saying the Speaker's widow will not seek the Democratic nomination.

companies, and creates unfair competition.

In another conference, Thomas W. S. Parsons, assistant commissioner of British Columbia police, proposed that the United States adopt the Canadian system of provincial police in each State, with some form of National police to assist in tracking down criminals.

He advocated a single National criminal law under which a warrant would be valid in any part of the country. Canadians, he said, can not grasp the idea of extradition as between States.

Parsons advanced a plan under which regional police training schools, operated by the Federal Government, would be established. Each State would send its officers there for instruction.

"With a surplus of West Point trained officers in the United States, those men could be made the executives of these police forces and training schools," he said. "Back of the 'regulars' would be an unpaid reserve force of young men subsidized by service clubs, such as Rotary."

State Rights End Seen.

Attorney General Schnader expressed the opinion that if the State "acquiesce in the increasing incroachments of the Federal Government upon State sovereignty, it will not be long until there will be no State rights remaining for which to fight, and perhaps no States."

"There is scarcely a single field of taxation which has not been invaded by the Federal Government," he said.

Wells told the public utility law section, that the Government "attempts to force the (utilities) industry into compliance with code provisions which it does not live up to itself."

"Additional and special taxes are levied on the industry and the Government competitors are specifically exempt from such taxes," he said.

"Black Widow" Spider Bites Movie Actor

Hollywood, Aug. 27 (AP).—Studio officials disclosed today Sir Guy Standing, actor, is suffering from the bite of a venomous "black widow" spider.

Standing, who has been on location in the San Fernando Valley, was bitten nearly a week ago, but his recovery has been rapid. His leg, where the tiny insect struck, is still greatly swollen, however.

boor the 21-gun Presidetnial salute.

The cadets drilled with the same smart precision that makes them a favorite for the newsreels. A crowd of several thousand was on hand for the occasion. After it was over Mr. Roosevelt congratulated Col. Simon B. Buckner, commandant of cadets, and the cadet commander, Hubert C. Gee, and then retired to the garden of Gen. and Mrs. Connor for tea and a bite to eat before leaving.

Favored by perfect weather, the President set out in midmorning for his inspection tour. First he stopped at the Wallkill State Prison, where 305 model prisoners are loosely guarded, receiving "rehabilitation through education." There he learned that only 9 of the 892 inmates since it was opened in 1932 have escaped, 8 of them returning voluntarily. It is a prison without walls, only faintly forbidding in its Norman architecture.

Cheered by Prisoners.

During both visits the President passed through lanes of prisoners, who waved and cheered in response to the famous Roosevelt smile.

At the boys' institution, he stopped in the midst of a crowd of inmates and signed a notebook for one of them. The visits were entirely informal, with Mr. Roosevelt pausing only long enough to chat with officials.

Before arriving at West Point the President's car was stopped by the roadside while assistants fixed in place the American flag and the Presidential emblem. It was an official visit, the first for West Point since 1922. Further to show his interest, the President promised to address the graduating class next June.

Back at Hyde Park house tonight, Mr. Roosevelt planned two conferences tomorrow. First, he will see Alfred J. Pearson, economist and awthor, of Drake University, who has just returned from a trip to Europe. Then, at luncheon, he will go over New York affairs and politics with his old friend, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

magic, or in guaranteed profits or in price fixing, or think that a series of rules * * * will prove any more successful when applied to an industry such as ours than they did when applied to the liquor traffic."

Throngs Hear Argument.

The conflicting statements of the two men were made in addresses before the throngs assembled in this historic little oil town to celebrate the diamond jubilee of oil and the dedication of a museum to the memory of Col. Edwin L. Drake, whose crude, wooden-rigged oil well, the first in history, "blew in" 75 years ago today. The thousands braved a dull drizzle to take part in the exercises which began with parades and fireworks last Friday and ended with a grand ball tonight.

The petroleum administrator told the crowds that he believed "we are at the dawn of a better day" for the industry and that, "except for a small, lawless minority, which does not scruple to cut any corner, to flout any law, to tear up any regulation, to violate any of the common decencies that are supposed to control reputable business men, the oil industry is, in my judgment, determined on a course that will differentiate an orderly, well-regulated future from a disorganized and disorderly past. * * *

"Here was an irreplaceable natural resource, indispensable to our industry, and constituting the very life blood of the Nation in time of war, which was being ruthlessly and wastefully exploited by men whose chief concern was to get quickly what profit there might be in oil, without pausing to consider the effect upon society," said Ickes.

"So Government has come into the oil industry as the conservator of the public interest," he added. "Happily, it did not have to force its way in; it came in because the industry itself began to realize there was more to the oil business than the squeezing out of a quick profit by fair means or by foul."

Cites Growth of Industry.

Lauding the vision of the pioneer Drake, he cited the growth of the industry from the production of 20 barrels of oil a day to its present growth of a $12,000,000,000 enterprise.

Byles, pointing out that opinions differ "as to the policy which should be adopted for the petroleum industry upon the expiration of the National industrial recovery act next year," said he believed that "beyond the supply of raw material, the hand of the Government should be removed, and, in the public interest, competition as to price and quality and service begin."

"Some of us," he asserted, "are still simple enough to believe that economic laws are inexorable; that if too much crude oil is not produced, too much gasoline and other products can not be; that, as a result of such a balance, price will take care of itself."

The Drake Museum, which will house relics of oil pioneering days and other exhibits of interest to the oil industry, was accepted for the State by Gov. Pinchot, who criticized the "kings of finance" for what he termed their "failure to lead us out of the great depression."

Gov. George White of Idaho, a native of Titusville, presided at the celebration.

Lindbergh Called Brilliant Biology Pupil by Teacher

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP).—The newspaper Le Jour said today that Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the scientific staff of the Rockefeller Institute, in conversations with friends had pictured Col. Charles Lindbergh as a brilliant student of biology.

Dr. Carrel is quoted as saying: "The whole world knows and admires the first man who flew the Atlantic alone. You know his extreme modesty and what I am willing to tell you about him nobody suspects in America. He follows my course assiduously and has become my best assistant in biology. The name he will leave in that science will be as illustrious as that in aviation."

At the Rockefeller Institute in New York it was said that the institute's policy forbade giving out any information on Col. Lindbergh's work there.

stood, too, that it will be to assume a different post, with Richberg succeeding him at his present assignment. Whether the latter will retain his NRA job remains to be seen.

The dispute, dormant for weeks, which precipitated these moves on the chess board of the recovery campaign, found its expression in direct language at the White House one week ago yesterday.

Miss Perkins and Richberg had submitted a plan for the reorganization of NRA which Johnson interpreted as aimed at his own retirement to private life. Without mincing words he told the President what he thought of it.

Hot Argument Ensues.

Present were both Miss Perkins and Richberg. Denials and argument followed. Mr. Roosevelt suggested that Johnson, in view of long months of unremitting labor, take a real rest, go abroad and study recovery efforts there.

That lit the fuse of Johnson's wrath. Angrily asserting he would do no such thing, he strode brusquely from the room. His state of mind was apparent at the time to those who talked with him as he left. Later Miss Perkins and Richberg slipped out by a side entrance, evading newsmen.

The President was retiring late that night when a messenger brought a special message from Johnson. Its three typewritten pages recalled Johnson's work for NRA; listed in unvarnished language his opinion of his enemies, and bluntly stated his determination to quit.

It ended with a Latin phrase, a favorite of the President's, which freely translated says: "The situation speaks for itself."

President Asks He Stay.

Mr. Roosevelt called for pen and paper and replied immediately, reiterating his regard for Johnson, asking that the resignation be withdrawn, and concluding with another proverb: "Friends always must be friends."

Next day, Mr. Roosevelt left for the funeral of Speaker Rainey, announcing a change in the plans that would have taken him directly from Carrollton to Hyde Park, so that he might give his immediate personal attention to the difficulty.

Back in Washington he called for Johnson at once, and in the interview the breach was closed. He insisted that Johnson take a fortnight's rest and the general left for a Bethany Beach, Del., resort.

From there, he will go to Hyde Park, where he and the President will discuss and probably settle the details of the new set up in NRA and in it, Johnson will still be the commanding officer.

None of the principals in the controversy felt like discussing it yesterday.

Still In, Says Johnson; Denies Parley Walkout

Bethany Beach, Del., Aug. 27 (AP).—A vigorously-expressed assertion that he has not resigned was Hugh S. Johnson's response today to Washington reports of sharp personal strife over reorganization of the NRA.

Gen. Johnson was asked if he had not submitted his resignation as NRA chieftain to President Roosevelt last week and reconsidered only upon the earnest insistence of the President. He fired back.

"I have not resigned. That's all I have to say about that."

As to reports he had stormed out of a White House conference he asserted:

"They are without the foundation of fact. There is absolutely no truth in them. I refuse to discuss them further."

The general spent a large part of the day in recreation on the beach. Upon return to his cottage, he showed extreme reluctance to discuss official affairs.

"I came here for a rest," he said. "But I can't get any rest. No sooner than I come into sight somebody starts shooting questions at me."

members of the union committee in the hope that a beginning may be made toward the settlement of the strike. Please wire us."

Leaders reported the exact hour of the strike would be announced Thursday. It was generally expected Saturday, September 1, would be the date chosen. With the industry on a five-day week and the mills closed Saturday and Labor Day falling Monday, the tie-up probably will not be felt until Tuesday, September 4.

The strike committee called mass meetings for Labor Day in city squares and village commons from Maine to Alabama.

"It has been ordered that a statement of the strike purpose be read in each meetings," Gorman declared.

"These meetings will mark in dramatic fashion the full force of the strike and they will serve likewise to bring to the people of each community a fair statement of the reason that prompts 600,000 workers to enter into the hardship of a strike with an enthusiasm which can be fully understood only by those who have determined at last to make a final stand for liberty and a decent recognition of rights."

The union executive council, Gorman announced, will meet here Thursday. He intimated the group would vote to call out silk, rayon and woolen workers the same day the cotton textile employes leave their machines.

"We are confident," Gorman said, "that if the people of the United States understand the issues and know the facts as they are to be found in the mills themselves they would agree with us that there is no solution to be found while the mills are running.

"We attribute this to several causes, including the absolute refusal on the part of the reactionaries within the industry to carry out the principles of the National industrial recovery act. They have flaunted the economic and humane provisions of the act and in desperation have tried to even up their costs by imposing excessive task burdens on the backs of the workers."

A written agreement between the Aluminum Co. of America and the Aluminum Workers Council was considered at a meeting in the Labor Board's offices attended by representatives of all concerned. The conference will be resumed today. The strike has been in progress several weeks.

Workers Protest Garment Code

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Representatives of the cotton garment industry from all parts of the country, meeting today, resolved that they "can not accept or acquiesce in the wage and hour provisions" of their code as amended by the NRA last week.

They authorized their counsel, Raymond A. Walsh, of Washington, "to take such legal steps, if necessary, as may be proper in the protection of the rights and interests of the members" of the industry.

The Presidential order of last Tuesday would amend the code to provide a maximum work week of 36 hours instead of the present 40, with the minimum wage for the shorter week unchanged. It also would increase piece rates 10 per cent over those of last May 1.

Alabama Plants Deny Armament

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 27 (AP).—Paul A. Redmond, president of Alabama Mills, Inc., operators of nine textile mills in north Alabama, said tonight that there were no machine guns or tear gas in the company's plants and that none would be placed there. Three of these plants were closed in the recent Alabama textile strike.

Redmond said that if strikes were called in any of the company's mills the plants would be closed until the employes asked for them to be reopened.

Welcome Rains Drench Kansas, West Missouri

Kansas City, Aug. 27 (AP).—Rains varying from a mere shower to heavy downpours, fell today over a generous portion of Kansas and the western part of Missouri.

Central Kansas, reports from Great Bend showed, was washed by a fairly heavy rain, putting 2 feet of water in the Arkansas River which has had a dry channel all summer. The rain measured 1½ inches at Great Bend and more than an inch at Kansas City.

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION

NRA Critics Face Retort By Richberg

Chairman Fletcher Says Industry Has Declined Under NRA.

Under a cross-fire of criticism from the Republican camp, Donald R. Richberg, secretary of the President's executive council, last night was drafting a second report to the President on New Deal accomplishments in relieving farm distress.

Hardly was the ink dry yesterday on the first Richberg report of Administration "progress" than Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National committee, launched a bitter attack on the Richberg conclusions. Chairman Fletcher charged that industrial production had declined in all classifications save one since the NRA and AAA phases of the President's recovery set-up became operative.

The second of the Richberg series of reviews on the effect of New Deal legislation is expected to be completed Wednesday, supplementing claims advanced Sunday that 4,120,000 workers were reemployed between June, 1933 and June, 1934, and that industrial pay rolls jumped from $96,000,000 to $132,000,000 in the Administration's first year.

Strike Losses Omitted.

Chairman Fletcher charged Richberg left entirely out of his appraisal "the terrific economic losses which have been occasioned in the past 12 months by strikes" and made comparisons that did not "start at scratch."

Holding the report compared present conditions with conditions in the spring and early summer of 1933, Mr. Fletcher declared comparisons instead should have been made with conditions when the AAA and NRA acts actually became effective.

"Such a comparison," insisted the Republican National committee chairman, "shows that during the period since these two outstanding so-called recovery measures became effective, business activity has declined, private construction has declined, car loadings have declined." Although car loading in live stock and grains picked up, Chairman Fletcher said this was a result of the drought and "an evidence of distress and not prosperity."

Says Autos Only Gainers.

The Republican campaign chieftain declared automobiles alone have shown increased production since the NRA and AAA swung into operation, and that the purchasing power of the farmers' dollar stood at an index of 66 in July, 1934, compared with 71 in July, 1933.

Under the caption, "Mr. Richberg's Busy Day," Chairman Fletcher lashed into virtually all of the NRA counsel's conclusions, blaming both the NRA and the AAA for the country's economic troubles.

He cited American Federation of Labor statistics in asserting that unemployment is 300,000 greater today than it was in October last year, and that the total number of unemployed workers is in the neighborhood of 10,000,000. He said that the Department of Labor's own reports show the slump in industrial employment in July this year "the greatest in 15 years," and that industrial workers are getting less "real" wages than they were a year ago.

Says Rise Was Last Year.

It was Mr. Fletcher's contention that the bulk of improvement noted in the Richberg report took place before July, 1933, before any of the so-called New Deal measures had been put into effect.

"Government figures issued by departments under the New Deal," he said, "show that upon the return of public confidence in April, 1933, following the bank panic, there was continuous improvement in practically every field of business until the first week in August, when the deadening effects of the so-called recovery measures began to take effect.

"The American economic system, which the 'New Dealers' continually portray as being outworn, impotent and inequitable, functioned magnificently last year from April until August, bringing to President Roosevelt's 'average man' earning his living in industry, agriculture or business a greater degree of real prosperity than he has enjoyed since, without producing industrial unrest, suspicion and warfare."

Chairman Fletcher called on Mr. Richberg to include in his next report strike statistics, which he said were "conspicuously absent" in his last. "This should include not only the loss in hours of labor and wages of the strikers but the losses inflicted upon other workers in industry, upon industry itself, upon farmers, business and commerce," he said.

"Figures have been given from time to time that the larger strikes of the past few months have occasioned losses running into the hundreds of millions of dollars, threw thousands of innocent working men out of employment, deprived agriculture of its markets and completely paralyzed the commercial activities of many of our larger cities.

"If so, it constitutes a very heavy liability against the 'New Deal's' policies, and particularly against the NRA, in which Mr. Richberg is an influential official."

Among the industrial classifications Mr. Fletcher said had declined in production since the institution of the NRA, he listed coal, electric power, lumber, petroleum and steel.

"The index number of production of automobiles August 18, 1934, was 70.6, as against 70.7 August 18, 1933," he said. "Cotton consumption and textile production have declined; pig iron, boot and shoe, silk and zinc production all have declined."

Tom, Famous Old Fire Horse, Will Miss Labor Day Parade

Crop Control Up to Farmer, Davis Asserts

AAA Chief Carries New Deal Message Into Corn Belt.

Des Moines, Aug. 27 (AP).—Chester C. Davis, AAA Administrator, today placed squarely before the Nation's farmers the problem of future cooperative agricultural adjustment.

"It's your show," he said. "In the last analysis you will be the final court."

Carrying the New Deal to the corn belt, where he was born and reared, Davis headlined Farm Bureau Day at the Iowa State Fair.

He spoke under a tent to about 500 farmers and farm women and a radio audience.

"Unless the farmers of this country can organize to keep the advantage they are about to hold in their hands, in my judgment we will be back on the ruins of bankruptcy and surpluses," he warned.

The product of an Iowa farm, Davis told his fellow Hawkeyes:

"We are passing out of the emergency stage. The new phase into which we are passing is one of cooperative effort by farmers toward a desired goal—that amount of production in crops best for the Nation and best for the individual."

After reviewing the farmer's position before the agricultural adjustment act was passed, Davis said "farmers found that they could apply the game of economics to their production just the same as labor and industry."

Referring to the drought and Governmental aid, Davis asserted that "the whole effort of the Government in meeting the drought is to soften the blow where drought hits hardest and to distribute the burden over the rest of the Nation." The AAA, he said, will spend in the neighborhood of $420,000,000 in 23 of the worst drought-stricken States this year. This may run as high as $580,000,000, he added.

The administrator stoutly defended the processing tax, pointing to price rises since the AAA program went into effect. "These price gains were made possible by money received by processing taxes," he declared.

Veterans to Sail Thursday.

National Capital Chapter, No. 2, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, will hold a moonlight excursion at 8:30 p. m. on Thursday, leaving on the steamer Potomac from the wharf at Sixth and Water streets southwest.

21 Years Are Too Many, Double Work Too Much, Bargagni Decides.

Old Tom, sole survivor of the horses that pulled Washington fire engines before the machine age made them steeds of leisure, will be missing from the Labor Day parade this year.

At the great old age of 21, Tom, white and spirited despite the ravages of Father Time, nibbled grass yesterday in the peaceful meadows of Blue Plains Home for the Aged and Infirm.

He snorted contemptuously at passing automobiles, apparently unaware that he will not be back at his post pulling the fire engine September 3.

"Tom's just too darned old, and the strain might hurt him," explained Fire Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, Tom's closest human friend.

"The drag would be too much this year. There's a firemen's division leading the Labor Day parade here, and then there's the big parade in Alexandria, with firemen from everywhere participating.

"Tom couldn't stand up under the double responsibility. You see, the firemen in the parade here are going over to Alexandria as soon as Washington's review is finished.

"So a substitute's going to bat for Tom."

Standing on a knoll, his wise, brown eyes twinkling with the wisdom of old age, Tom ate the grass and dreamed of the great days of yesterday.

Days when he and his now dead comrades of the fire harness, Gene and Barney, clattered to the exciting jangling of bells down Washington's streets to fires great and small.

Smoke billowing from engines, crowds standing back, sparks from smashing hoofs, excitement galore! Old Tom entered the Fire Department as young Tom more than 19 years ago. He and Gene and Barney, all snow white, clattered to glory again and again.

On a winter night, when the streets were covered with ice, and a three-alarm fire sounded, the trio of galloping white horses made a gorgeous spectacle as they pulled the engine.

Black smoke whirling from the engine! Women and children and men and property in danger! Work to be done!

"He seemed to say that he thought those were the good old, great old days," said Bargagni yesterday.

Bargagni may not even tell Tom he's decided to recruit three younger horses, three young upstarts out of nowhere, to pull the old-fashioned engine in the parade.

"It might break his heart," ventured Bargagni.

Texas Relief Session Of Legislature Meets

Austin, Tex., Aug. 27 (AP).—The Texas Legislature met in special session today to grapple with the problems of providing relief for thousands of needy families.

The session was convened by Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson to issue $9,500,000 in State relief bonds to match general grants by the Federal Government.

Farm Income Will Increase Billion in 1934

Higher Prices and Benefit Payments Combine to Aid Growers.

American farmers will have an income exceeding $6,000,000,000 this year, or approximately $1,000,000,000 more than they earned last year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated last night.

The increase, particularly notable because of the ravages of this summer's crop-killing drought, will be brought about through higher prices and benefit payments from the Federal Government.

The bureau said that farmers already have received approximately $2,894,000,000 in cash income from sales of crops. In addition $170,000,000 was distributed by the AAA as benefit payments during the first seven months of 1934, and $13,000,000 was paid cattlemen for cattle purchased by the Government in drought-stricken areas.

During the last five months of 1933, farmers received $2,377,000,000 in return for their products. The bureau estimated that this figure will be increased from 3 to 6 per cent for the same period this year, because of higher prices.

Benefits Are $350,000,000.

Rental and benefit payments during the same period are expected to total about $350,000,000, with $90,000,000 additional if the AAA completes its plan to purchase 7,000,000 head of cattle and 5,000,000 sheep and goats before January 1.

These estimates, the bureau said, were based on analyses of probable production totals, probable prices and marketing conditions during the ensuing five-month period, and cash income already derived by farmers during 1934.

AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis pointed out that most of the benefit payments are being distributed in States designated as emergency and secondary drought areas, and that these checks will constitute the only source of income to many farmers whose crops have been destroyed.

Davis said payments to the 24 States included in these areas up to July 1 had totaled $150,000,000.

Purchasing Power Lags.

Louis H. Bean, director of the Economics Bureau, said, however, that the farmers' purchasing power, although increased over that of last year, would not increase as much as the farm income.

Bean emphasized that from 1932 to 1933 the index of prices paid by the farmer for articles he used advanced only 2 per cent, whereas from June, 1932, to June, 1934, the advance totaled 14 per cent. This, he declared, would partially offset the increase in gross farm income for the past two years.

Davis said that every State and one territory, Puerto Rico, would share in benefit and rental payments. He said the total farm income in 1933 was $5,051,000,000 and that on this basis the $6,000,000,000 1934 income estimate would represent a 19 per cent increase.

Doomed to Die by Gas, Man Gets Retrial Today

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 27 (AP).—Walter R. Reppin, confessed slayer of Vincent Regan, Colorado Springs taxi driver, in a holdup, will enter the district court here tomorrow in a second battle for his life.

The Newark, N. J., youth was granted a new trial by the supreme court while he was in a death cell expecting to become the first victim of Colorado's new lethal gas chamber.

Freed in Racket Death, Man Faces Arms Charge

William Redford, colored, 36, cleared of blame in the fatal "numbers racket" shooting several weeks ago, will face a jury trial September 20 on charges of carrying a concealed weapon and discharging firearms. He pleaded not guilty to both counts in Police Court yesterday.

Redford, admittedly a bodyguard for a "numbers" operator, was cleared by a coroner's jury in connection with the death of Henry Irving, 26. Irving was shot and killed at New Hampshire avenue and Quincy street northwest during an attempted robbery.

Caterpillars Stage Comeback, Denuding Trees in Capital Area

Tens of thousands of caterpillars are concentrating their destructive efforts in the Northeast and Southeast sections of the city. Residents at Seventh and East Capitol streets have complained to the Department of trees because of their destructive activities.

ward compulsory consolidation of the carriers in order to effect economies and place waterway lines, trucks and buses under strict regulation in order to lessen the competition from the latter quarter.

It is generally conceded that the economies from consolidation will not be substantial as long as the railroads are barred from eliminating personnel. On the other hand, it is virtually certain Congress, due to political pressure, will never consent to any scheme which will throw tens of thousands of railroad workers out of employment. Yet, as each year passes, it is argued, this aspect of the problem becomes less important since railroad employment gradually decreases through deaths and retirements.

Dry Forces Map New Fight on Alcohol

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 27 (AP).—Prohibition leaders from six Midwestern States met at Winona Lake, near here, today to plan a new drive against the use of liquor.

Superintendents of Antisaloon Leagues in Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana were in charge of the meeting. F. Scott McBride, of Washington, general superintendent of Antisaloon League of America, is scheduled to speak.

Recaptured Slayer Resentenced to Die

Tulia, Tex., Aug. 27 (AP).—Ed (Perchmouth) Stanton was resentenced to death by Judge Charles Clements here today for the slaying of Sheriff J. C. Moseley, of Swisher County. His execution was set for September 28.

The condemned man was first sentenced September 15, 1933. While his case was on appal, Stanton escaped the Lubbock Jail June 24, 1934, and was at liberty until Sheriff G. R. Fletcher captured him at Therma, N. Mex., last Thursday.

Northeast and Southeast Sections Are Affected; Spraying Resumed.

It's raining caterpillars out in the neighborhood of East Capitol and Seventh streets.

Tumbling from numerous trees, the invaders, known scientifically as tussock moths, crawl along the sidewalks and lawns. They come visiting where they are unwelcome, wriggling up porch steps and parking on veranda rails. They drop to the cement soundlessly, and sometimes fall on children's arms, sending them running with startled screams.

What is worse, the caterpillars are denuding the trees, eating the leaves with great gusto.

To tussock moths leaves are roast goose, duckling, turkey, caviar, champagne and all the trimmings. Their principal nourishment is obtained from the foliage, where they feed and later nest.

For the past six years the caterpillars have been kept well under control. For some unknown cause they have visited Washington for a second time this year, just as the Department of District Trees was congratulating itself on having coped with them for another successful season.

The concentration, which began several weeks ago, is principally in the northeast and southeast sections of the city. The reason for this is unknown.

"Simply a coincidence," said Assistant Superintendent of Trees C. B. Wallace yesterday.

Superintendent of Trees Clifford Lanham is doing everything he can to check the caterpillars.

Trees are being sprayed, but the method is only partially successful. The spray does not poison the caterpillars, but the leaves they eat. When they're nesting they don't eat. Consequently many escape.

It took the District almost a quarter of a century to get the destructive tussock moths under control.

Residents where the caterpillars are most numerous—estimated 1,000 to a tree—have complained to Lanham and his assistants. Now the trees are being sprayed again, but the procession of fuzzy caterpillars continues.

"The caterpillars do not harm the tree itself, but merely get the leaves," commented Wallace. "I do not think we shall lose any trees this year."

Tussock moths, which survive the counter-attack of added spray, after nesting and following Nature's plan, will emerge as gliding, gayly colored moths.

South Dakota Drops Levy on State Property

Pierre, S. Dak., Aug. 27 (AP).—The South Dakota board of equalization today announced elimination of the State property tax levy for the second consecutive year.

Director W. C. Welsh said: "The board feels the gross income tax and miscellaneous collections will provide sufficient revenue to take care of the needs of the State government until the coming session of the State Legislature. At that time legislation can be enacted to either broaden the scope of the gross income tax to get more revenue, or some new tax program can be worked out."

$60,000 Lent To Aexandria For School

Sum Is in Addition to $250,000 Previously Advanced.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
807 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Approval of an additional loan of $60,000 for completing construction and equipping of the new Alexandria High School building has been received by City Manager Wallace Lawrence from Col. J. A. Anderson, of the Virginia Public Works Administration.

The entire cost of the building, including land, but not including equipment, will be $328,969, the tract upon which it will be erected having cost $26,000. The original loan from the PWA for school purposes was $300,000, of which $250,000 was intended for the high school building and $50,000 for other school purposes, including a colored school to supplement the present Parker-Gray School.

The city council was of the opinion that money could be saved by constructing the building by force account, and advertised for bids on that basis, but the PWA disapproved this method. Bids were then asked for construction under a general contract, and the lowest was $292,369, by Doyle & Russell, of Richmond. Adding to this the cost of the land, $26,000; $7,000 for supervision and $3,600 for metal sash, not included in the contract, brought the cost to $328,969.

The bid of Doyle & Russell was accepted and contract entered into, and the city manager instructed, by resolution of council, to apply for an additional loan of $60,000 for school purposes. A building to be used as an auxiliary colored school was purchased at a cost of approximately $15,000, which is to be remodeled.

The superintendent of Alexandria public schools has issued instructions regarding the rental of textbooks from the city school board. Textbooks will be issued to those who present receipts for books turned in last spring, upon presentation of the receipts in the individual schools on September 5. Those pupils who have no receipts, but can produce reasonable evidence that they turned in their books, may be issued receipts and permitted to rent books, otherwise they will be required to purchase books at the retail price. The rental price for books will be $1.50 for the elementary grades and $2 for the high school. No credit will be extended in any case.

Parents whose children secure the rental books will be responsible for their care and return in accordance with an agreement which will be sent them at the time the books are issued.

The rules of the Virginia ABC board that a purchaser of liquor from the State stores be required to sign his name on a sales slip is to be changed, according to an announcement yesterday, and the purchaser may simply indicate "yes" or "no" on the slip in answer to the question as to his legal qualification to purchase liquor.

The W. C. T. U. recently entered a strong protest against the practice indulged in by some Alexandrians who, for reasons best known to themselves, signed the sales slips with such names as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, "Pussyfoot Johnson" and others obviously fictitious, and the drys asked that managers and clerks in the liquor stores be instructed to require purchasers to sign their own names.

Funeral services of Joseph A. Stewart, who died Saturday at his home, 416 Wilkes street, Alexandria, will be conducted at the residence at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and interment will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Mr. Stewart is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maud Stewart, and three sisters—Mrs. Hattie Martin, of Lansing, Mich.; Mrs. Bertie Poland, of Washington, and Mrs. Abbie Bartlett, of Alexandria.

North Ireland Bans O'Duffy From Entry

Church Group Ignores Attack

Adventists Make No Reply to Young Democrats' Political Charges.

The conference committee of the general conference of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church at its meeting yesterday morning in Takoma Park, Md., failed to act on a resolution adopted last week by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park asking an opinion on the right of ministers, teachers and employes of the denomination to participate in political affairs.

Although no official statement was given, it was indicated by conference leaders that the denomination conference will ignore the resolution. The Rev. C. S. Longacre, president of the Religious Liberty Association, an affiliate of the denomination, stated that the resolution was indefinite and did not warrant an answer.

The resolution cited alleged political activities on the part of Millward C. Taft, Republican member of the Takoma Park Town Council and Fusion candidate for the Maryland House of Delegates, and the Rev. Heber H. Votaw, Seventh-Day Adventist minister. It further quoted excerpts from the manual, Gospel Workers, published by the Review & Herald Publishing Co., an Adventist institution, stating that denomination employes should take no part in political campaigns.

Bust Is Unveiled At Lee Exercises

Famous General Honored on 127th Anniversary.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Ceremonial unveiling of a bust of the famous Confederate general, Robert E. Lee, was an outstanding feature here today of the third annual Lee Week celebration honoring the 127th anniversary of the birth of the Southern military leader.

The bust was modeled by Joseph C. Motto, sculptor, of Rome and Cleveland, Ohio.

Among those participating in the exercises were Gov. H. G. Kump and Mrs. Kump and Attorney General Homer A. Holt and Mrs. Holt. A Southern arts exhibit, addresses on the life of Lee and a polo match between the Greenbrier Polo Club and the Fauquier-Loudoun Club of Virginia were other features on the program.

Sanitary Board Lists Suburban Costs in 1933

Montgomery, Prince Georg Expenditures Placed at $1,343,556.

Maintenance and operation of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission water and sewer system in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md., amounted to $213,046 during the calendar year 1933, according to the auditor's report filed yesterday by the commission.

The commission also expended $146,395 for the purchase of bonds for the commission's sinking fund. New construction during the year required the expenditure of $451,898, while bond interest and expense accounted for $445,182. Total expenditures during the year were $1,343,556.

During the same period receipts amounted to $1,052,817, the largest item of which is represented by front foot benefit assessments, which amounted to $358,885. Of this amount $202,434 represented assessments in Prince Georges County and $149,170 in Montgomery County. The sum of $317,459 was received from water service charges, and the seven-cent sanitary district local tax netted $62,146.

Other receipts included $45,468 from house connection charges and $53,097 from miscellaneous sources including billed work for consumers and bond sales in the sinking fund.

Administration and general expense items of the commission amounted to $36,154, of which $8,820 represented commissioners' salaries, $18,012 employes' salaries, and $3,500 rent.

Receipts for the year were $290,739 less than expenditures, reducing the cash balance of the commission from $865,001 to $574,262. During 1933 the commission sold $200,000 in bonds from which it realized $188,968.

The results of the audit were announced by T. Howard Duckett, of Hyattsville, chairman of the commission; Emory H. Bogley, of Chevy Chase, and J. Donald Clagett, of Silver Spring, Montgomery County members of the commission.

The commission provides water and sewer service in the suburban communities of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. Headquarters of the engineering staff of the commission are in Hyattsville, while the executive offices are in a Washington office building.

The commission has several large construction projects under way, the largest at Burnt Mills, in Montgomery County, where a huge new water filtration plant is rapidly nearing completion.

Forbes to Run For Sasscer's Seat in Senate

Prince Georges G.O.P. Files Candidacy; Democrats Map Strategy.

The Republican State Central Committee of Prince Georges County yesterday filed the candidacy of Frank Forbes, of Aquasco, Md. for the Maryland State Senate.

The candidacy will fill the vacancy created by Frank Small, who withdrew last week and refiled for the Board of County Commissioners. Forbes will oppose Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democrat, who will run for reelection in the November elections.

Apparently uncertain as to what steps to take, the county Republicans at first entered the name of William Elbert Pyles, of Suitland, Md. This name was withdrawn in the latter part of the week and the position remained open until the announcement of the Forbes candidacy.

Another move in the political field yesterday consisted of a meeting of the county's Democratic State Central Committee. The more important business transacted was not made public, but it was made known that talks concerning Democratic strategy were made by Senator Sasscer, T. Howard Duckett, of Hyattsville; Ogle Marbury, of Laurel, and George N. Palmer, chairman, of Seat Pleasant.

Unofficially, it was stated that the general trend of the meeting was toward the laying of plans for the primaries, September 12.

Announcements were also made during the day of the meetings of two other Democratic Clubs. The Young Men's Democratic Club of the county will meet at 8 p. m. Thursday at the Odd Fellows Hall, Hyattsville. Smith W. Purdum, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, will speak on "The Administration of the Postoffice Department."

The Vansville Democratic Club will meet tonight at Grange Hall, Beltsville, Md.

Five Captured In Chase Held As Hijackers

U. S. Commissioner Will Appoint Date for Trial Today.

J. Frank Parran, United States commissioner at Upper Marlboro, will set a date today for the hearing of five Washington men held for investigation in connection with an alleged attempted hijacking at Bladensburg Sunday night.

Three of the men, Max Splar, 27; Henry Leish, 31, and Frederick Redmond, 29, are held in the Marlboro Jail. Two others, John L. Bailey, 35, and Oscar Downs, 30, are held at Hyattsville.

The men were arrested after Bladensburg Town Bailiff Lawrence Dayton noticed Splar tussling with the others in front of a local barbecue stand. The men were said to have been attempting to hijack a load of liquor from Splar's car.

Dayton called Prince Georges County Constables Howard Slater and Warren Peake. The men fled as the cars approached. A chase ensued and several shots were fired. The men were taken near the District line.

Facsimile reproduction of Schwarz Laboratories analysis of NEUWEILER'S Cream Ale

We don't ask you to take our word for this. We selected a few bottles at random from stock and sent them to the nationally famous Schwarz Laboratories of New York. Trucker Fined For Gas Haul Into Arlington

Failure of Capital Driver to Pay State Tax Leads to Court.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The State of Virginia yesterday obtained its first conviction in its campaign to end gasoline bootlegging from the District of Columbia.

Frank Simmons, colored, 18, of Washington, was convicted in the County Court of Arlington County of violating the Virginia law, which makes it unlawful to import gasoline into the State without a permit and on which the State tax has not been paid. Gasoline in tanks connected with automobile motors is excepted. Simmons was fined $15 and costs and required to pay the State tax on 149 gallons.

During the trial yesterday L. M. Johnston, of Arlington, told the court that he had sent Simmons into Washington to obtain gasoline and that the gasoline was to be used in a fleet of trucks owned by Johnston, which are engaged in paving contracts in Washington. Several of the trucks were in Johnston's garage for minor repairs during the week-end.

The court held that inasmuch as the gasoline had been transported into the State and was to have been used in trucks which were in the State that the State tax law had been violated.

New Deal Issue Sought.

The Arlington County, Va., Democratic committee would welcome a Congressional fight in the Eighth District this year that would revolve almost entirely around the question of whether the New Deal has accomplished what was intended and whether the Administration policies should be continued, according to Charles R. Fenwick, chairman of the county committee.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, an ardent advocate of Administration measures and policies, is opposed by John Locke Green, Republican, of Arlington County, who has definitely stated that he is opposed to the New Deal. Green has written Representative Smith inviting him to debate the issues of the campaign at a meeting at Manassas on September 8.

Chairman Fenwick stated that if Green is opposed to the New Deal, then he must be in favor of the Old Deal and "we are ready to accept the challenge on that basis."

Debate Held Unlikely.

Local Democratic leaders do not believe that Green's debate invitation will be accepted, as Representative Smith habitually refrains from making campaign or any other kind of speeches.

Representative Smith, who has been ill, has not yet replied to Green's letter nor has he expressed his views in regard to the campaign. He has been invited to attend the September meeting of the Arlington County Democratic committee and advise it, what, if anything, he wishes to do in the campaign.

It is the belief of local politicians that if there is any political activity in the Congressional race it will not take place until near the end of the campaign.

Phone Operations Will Be Discussed

Company to Confer With Kensington C. of C.

Officials of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will confer tonight with representatives of the Kensington (Md.) Chamber of Commerce on the question of improved telephone service for that town.

The chamber last week requested that the Kensington telephone exchange be enlarged and modernized, even if it is found necessary to increase local rates.

According to Washington I. Cleveland, president of the chamber, his organization hopes to secure the modernization at an early date. A similar improvement was made at the Rockville (Md.) exchange last year.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THEY'RE going to start washing off a half century's grime and smoke from the Nation's most famous obelisk. Leaks have to be fixed and some plaster stuffed into the cracks probably caused by reverberations from speeches on Capitol Hill.

And Columbia is going to send its tallest announcer, Bob Trout, to ask workmen what it is all about. Seems he'll have to climb up a ladder on the outside to reach the top of the present scaffolding, about 50 feet from the base.

"Which is just high enough to break my neck," remarked Bob yesterday. Seems that if they waited a month, Bob would have to climb some 555 feet.

Les Bowman, WJSV engineer, will set up his ground equipment while Bob will merely have to guide a mike to the top of the scaffolding. Columbia listeners will hear all about the daring feat from 9:35 until 9:45 this morning.

Suggested questions that Bob might ask about the whitewashing: When do you expect to finish the job? . . . What do you use to wash it with? . . . What do you suppose it would be like to wash the Empire State, the Eiffel Tower? . . . Why did you take in Monument washing . . . do you use any starch?

* * * *

WE couldn't understand a word of it but an elegantly printed bulletin of German short-wave programs for September which came to us yesterday through the courtesy of Kurt G. Sell, of the Racquet Club, has shot a virus in our blood and affords at the same time an opportunity to delve in the mysteries of the Department of Commerce's new official log of world radiophone transmitters.

The "program des Deutschen Kurzwellensenders" can be picked up here, if your set is the last word, through stations DJD, operating on a wave length of 25.51 m. and 11.760 k. c., and DJC, which broadcasts simultaneously on 49.83 m. and 6.202 k. c. Both can be heard here at 5:30 and 10:45 p. m., Washington time.

Programs include a wide veriety of native music, news bulletins in both German and English, topical talks, and general features quite similar to those heard in America. The programs of September 15 and 22 at 8 and 8:15 p. m. respectively, will tell why "We have faith in our Leader."

Should you be so lucky as to pick up these stations, write us about it. Bear in mind that German stations play repeated scores, using bells. Announcements of the stations will sound something like "day"—"zhay"—"say" (DJC).

CLARENCE, the lad with the appetite, who instills an air of awe, mystery and the unknown into the Myrt and Marge broadcasts, might be pulling teeth today if his parents had prevailed in the career which they had planned.

Who is Clarence? He is a very personable young actor from Indiana who joined the "Chorus Girls of the Air" three years ago when they started their 7 o'clock spot with C. B. S. Only 25 years old, he's traveled the boards in veteran style.

"And to think that I nearly became a dentist," sighs this brown-eyed lad reaching for a handful of pretzels. Incidentally, the villian in the Myrt and Marge troupe is jovial and rather bar tenderish. His side-kick, the district attorney, is happiest smoking black cigars in an amber holder.

Taxi Drivers Plan D.C.Union

To Organize Sept. 11 for Higher Fares and NRA Code.

Formation of a District cab drivers' union to obtain a satisfactory code under the NRA and increased fares in Washington will be undertaken at a meeting scheduled to be held in Typographical Hall September 11, it was announced yesterday.

The meeting will be under the direction of J. E. Toone, union organizer for the American Federation of Labor. People's Counsel William A. Roberts, jr., and NRA officials have been invited to address the gathering.

Six objectives were proposed. These are to force the Washington cab business to adopt a code of fair competition that will do away with cut-throat competition; to put taxi rates back on a cost of operation basis; to have a limited number of drivers and cabs; to eliminate the rental system; to establish a fund to give members free legal aid in Traffic Court and pay sick and death benefits, and to have a regulation enacted that will prevent those who have other employment from obtaining identification cards.

Regulation of cabs in the District has annoyed officials for the past several years. Repeated efforts either to compel the use of meters or regular rates have failed.

Toone is being assisted by C. B. Cole, B. L. Henning and C. B. Canaday, representing the drivers.

Mrs. A.F.Darby Left $188,378

Six Daughters Share in Estate, Chiefly D. C. Realty.

The six daughters of Mrs. Annie F. Darby, who died July 30 at West Shadyside, Md., were named as the sole beneficiaries of her $188,378 estate, it was disclosed yesterday when a petition for probate of her will was filed in the District Supreme Court.

A son, Rufus Clark Darby, of Atlanta, Ga., receives nothing because, his mother said, he had already been provided for.

The daughters are Julia Weakley, 2807 Connecticut avenue northwest; Miriam Darby, 3811 Fulton street northwest; Annie Coffee, Decatur, Ga.; Elizabeth Ladson, Rockville, Md.; Jane Darby, 3109 Mount Pleasant street northwest, and Margaret Nairn, 1344 Jefferson street northwest.

Most of Mrs. Darby's estate consisted of Washington real estate. Attorney Stanley Holland, representing the American Security & Trust Co., filed the will.

George Wellington, colored, 22, said to be from New London, Conn., is being held on a charge of investigation in the Fairfax County (Va.) Jail. He was arrested Sunday, near Floris, by Deputy Sheriff Vernon Cockerille, of Herndon.

According to Sheriff E. P. Kirby, Wellington was seen attempting to enter the home of Albert Thompson, at Pender, by Edward Noland, a brother-in-law of Thompson, who lives next door. Noland obtained a shotgun and fired at Wellington as he ran into the woods. Mrs. Thompson and a small child were alone in the house at the time.

After leaving the Thompson home Wellington went to the home of James Powell, at Chantilly, about midnight, Sheriff Kirby said he was told. Powell, awakened by dogs, also fired at Wellington.

Questioned by Sheriff Kirby as to his reason for being in Fairfax County, Wellington is reported to have said he was looking for work.

Doomed to Die, Felon Will Aid Accused Pal

Sentenced Gangster Will Testify for Mais in Richmond Murder Trial.

Richmond, Aug. 27 (AP).—A man already convicted and sentenced to die will testify in the defense of Robert Mais, alleged member of the notorious tri-State gang, who today pleaded not guilty to a charge of murdering E. M. Huband in a Richmond Federal Reserve truck robbery. This surprising announcement was made by Charles W. Moss, chief defense counsel after a venire panel of 20 had been completed in Hustings Court.

Mr. Moss said that Walter Legenza, who a week ago was convicted of being a tri-State gangster participating in the robbery on March 8, and sentenced to die in the electric chair, would be led from his cell to testify in behalf of Mais who is on trial under an identical indictment. The attorney carefully guarded the nature of the testimony expected of Legenza.

With a recess of the court until 9 a. m. tomorrow, Judge John L. Ingram apparently was following a program similar to that of the Legenza trial which started at the same hour last Tuesday. A jury heard the testimony, saw the evidence, listened to arguments for 16 hours and returned the verdict 36 minutes later. Both the State and the defense today indicated that the testimony and evidence would be about the same as that of the Legenza trial.

Mother Defends Mais.

Mr. Moss said he planned to put Legenza on the stand and that Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, mother of the accused, was in the city and "might be in the courtroom." He said also that he "might ask for a change in venue." He said the speed with which Legenza was convicted might be prejudicial against Mais's best interest.

At her boarding-house room, the grey-haired, quiet spoken Mrs. Mais said "her son is innocent." "My boy never could have done anything like what they charge him with doing," she said. She said her son did not want her "to get mixed up in his trial in any way." She told how "Bobby," at the age of 12, went to work to help support his widowed mother, and brother and sister.

The defense probably will attempt to establish an alibi. Mais, in his defense testimony for Legenza said he was in Washington on the day of the murder. His admitted sweetheart, Marie McKeever, testified he and she were registered at a Washington Hotel on March 8.

Pleads Not Guilty.

Mais came into the courtroom today after a brief tete-a-tete with Marie, a striking young woman, who was dressed in a black dress with a big white bow at the neck. When Clerk Walter Christian read the indictment he said: "What say you, guilty or not guilty?" and the accused echoed "guilty or not guilty." The clerk repeated the question, and this time Mais answered "Not guilty."

When he recessed the court at noon today, Judge Ingram told the 20 veniremen they might go home tonight, but he cautioned them against discussing the case with any one, or allowing any one to discuss it with them. When they return tomorrow, counsel will strike 8, leaving a jury of 12, who then will be sworn in as jurors.

Huband was shot in a holdup near the Richmond express office. The bandits made away with a lot of canceled checks. The truck carried no money. The State will rest its case largely on the testimony of Arthur Misunas, who has pleaded guilty to participating in the robbery, and named Legenza, alias Davis, as the trigger man. Under the Virginia law participation in highway robbery is punishable by the death penalty.

Six prospective jurymen today were dismissed because they said they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment. The panel was completed in an hour and a half.

Voters Hear Goldsborough At Annapolis

Senator Says He Expects to Be G. O. P. Nominee for Governorship.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, former Governor of Maryland and aspirant for the Republican nomination for that office, spoke here today at a meeting in the interest of his candidacy.

Accompanying Senator Goldsborough and presiding at the meeting, held at the Hotel Maryland, was Joseph M. Armstrong. Others in his party were William L. Lehr, Brooklyn, Republican candidate for county commissioner, and John A. Moody, secretary, Republican Club of the county.

Mr. Goldsborough said he had traveled 3,000 miles throughout the State and was confident of his nomination and election. He had addressed, he said, more than 60 meetings.

The situation in Anne Arundel County is complex and the Republican party is divided three ways as to the gubernatorial nomination. Joseph M. Armstrong leads the Goldsborough forces, while Mayor Walter A. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, has declared for Mr. Niee, abandoning his own aspirations for the nomination and accepting the position of clerk of the Court of Appeals on the Nice slate. Charles A. Shearman, an associate of Mr. Quenstedt and secretary and treasurer of the Annapolis Water Co., is leading the forces of Webster Smith in the county.

Hill to Carry Fight Into Western Maryland

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Col. John Philip Hill, former Representative from the Third Maryland District, today announced plans for carrying his fight for the Republican Senatorial nomination into western Maryland.

Col. Hill left tonight for Frederick, Hagerstown and Cumberland, to interview district leaders. He is running on the ticket headed by Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, who is seeking the G. O. P. gubernatorial nomination. Col. Hill is opposed by Dr. Joseph I. France, who is running on the Harry W. Nice ticket, and by C. Wilbur Miller, running on the H. Webster Smith ticket.

Col. Hill will switch his activities Thursday to the Eastern Shore. He will campaign in Easton until Friday and Saturday will return to Baltimore to join in the reception for the Twenty-ninth Division Association, which opens its annual convention that day.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The Democratic State Central committee of Allegany County has filed with the board of election supervisors additional names of Democratic candidates which completes the list for the county to appear on the election ballot in November.

They are: State's attorney, W. Earle Cobey, Frostburg; register of wills, J. Joseph Lydinger, Cumberland; House of Delegates, Lee Wolford, Odith M. Brotemarkle, Dr. Joseph H. Spicer, Richard B. Smith and Thomas F. Conlon, Cumberland; J. DeSales Maher, Midland. Judges of the Orphans Court, Virgil T. Wolford (previously filed); John H. Griffin, Cumberland, and Frank B. McDermott, jr., Mount Savage.

Roosevelt an Aid To Labor Unions, Leader Declares

Logan, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—John B. Easton, of Williamstown, president of the West Virginia State Federation of Labor, told delegates at the opening of its three-day annual convention here today that the body had become "a real power" in the State during the last year. "As evidence of this fact," he said, "I was able recently to cause the cancellation of a contract because the company involved refused to employ union men."

Praising Roosevelt as "the greatest President who ever lived," Mr. Easton said most of the progress of the unions had been made since Mr. Roosevelt took office. Pointing out that 27 members of the federation are nominees for the State Legislature, he urged members to "find out who they are" before voting at the November elections.

The convention secretary reported 500 delegates attending. Mayor George C. Steele welcomed them to Logan at the opening, responses being made by Lee Hall, district representative of the United Mine Workers of America, and Easton.

Osteopath, Bitten By Black Widow Spider, Recovering

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Dr. C. W. Irvin, a Norfolk osteopath, today was recovering from the effects of being bitten six times yesterday by a black widow spider.

He immediately removed as much of the poison as possible and, although he suffered intense pain last night, was able to attend to business today.

Although scientists contend the bite of the black widow is more deadly than that of the rattlesnake, Dr. Irvin expressed the opinion today that the spider's bite, even if untreated, probably would not kill an adult. He thought, however, the poison would certainly kill small children.

Farmer Held After Bombing Attempt Fails

Berkeley County Police Jail D. P. Crim After Probe.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Charged with attempted murder as the result of finding a stick of dynamite in a window within a few feet of where Mr. and Mrs. Harry Easterday, of Berkeley County, slept, Davis P. Crim, 33, Berkeley County farmer, was being held under $2,000 bond here today for a hearing Thursday.

State police and a constable investigating, said the fuse to the dynamite had burned to within a few inches of the percussion cap. Suspicion was directed toward Crim when he was reported to have been seen leaving the Easterday property Friday night when the dynamite was discovered.

Police said they were told Crim and Easterday were unfriendly.

Officers said a search of the Crim place after his arrest yielded dynamite sticks similar to that found at the Easterday home. Crim denied all knowledge of the affair, police said, and offered an alibi covering the time in question.

Grand Jury Frees 20 Relief Picketers

Upholds Protest of Slash in Pay for Jobless.

Baltimore, Aug 27 (Spl.).—Twenty members of the People's Unemployment League, arrested last Wednesday on charges of picketing in front of the headquarters of the Baltimore Emergency Relief Commission, were dismissed today by the grand jury.

Among those freed was Mrs. Adelaide Mitchell, wife of Dr. Broadus Mitchell, Socialist candidate for Governor of Maryland and professor of economics at Johns Hopkins University. Seven of the others were women and 12 were men.

Slashes in the relief payments to jobless persons led to the picketing of the relief headquarters, Mrs. Mitchell and her associates said. Police testified the pickets were orderly, but were parading in front of the relief headquarters carrying banners demanding increased payments to the jobless. The grand jury ruled the charges were without foundation.

Hagerstown Fair May Be Canceled

Cost and Lack of Interest Given as Reasons.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The annual Hagerstown Agricultural Fair, scheduled for October 16-19, probably will be abandoned this year, President A. K. Coffman announced today.

Apparent lack of interest and expense were assigned as the reasons.

The fair would be unable to hold a racing meet in connection with the fair because of the ten-day meet held in the spring. The fair was usually assigned two five-day meets, one in the spring and the latter during the fair in the fall. The fall meet would have conflicted with other Maryland racing dates.

3,000 Attend Bible Parley's Final Session

Dr. Stidger Sees Social Justice Ahead in Talk at Massanetta.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—With the parting words of Dr. William L. Stidger, of Boston University, that "Franklin Delano Roosevelt is going to bring social justice to this Nation for the first time in its history," the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference last night ended its thirteenth annual session.

More than 3,000 persons attended the final day's events. They heard inspiring sermons by Dr. Stidger, Dr. William Evans, of Los Angeles, and Dr. S. D. Gordon, of New York. The famed Hagerstown a Capella choir, directed by Raymond K. Hollinger, a graduate of the Westminster Choir School, and the quartet from the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, Washington, provided the musical features of the day.

During the summer 30,000 have attended services on the Massanetta Springs grounds. More than 1,800 young people were enrolled at the weekly conferences sponsored by the Presbyterian, Methodist, Lutheran and Baptist denominations. Massanetta claims to have more young people at its sessions than any other bible conference in the country.

Pageant Outstanding Event.

Aside from the strictly religious features, the highlights of the summer season were the sacred music festival and the pageant depicting the establishment and growth of the Presbyterian church in the Shenandoah Valley.

Dr. William E. Hudson, conference manager, estimated today that a quarter of a million people have attended the conference sessions since they started 13 years ago. They have come from over half the States of the Union and have heard addresses by the outstanding preachers of the world.

New features which aroused wide interest this year were the round table on social and moral problems and the conference of church elders and deacons. During the closing week the daily program was given over to various denominations, Methodists, Baptist, United Brethren, Church of Christ, the Congregational Christian Church and Presbyterian.

Three Upheavals Seen.

Dr. Stidger, in his closing address last night, declared that the world faces three titantic upheavals in Russian communism, in the challenge to capitalism, and in the NRA's seeking social justice.

"Russia," said he, "is carrying on a tremendous experiment in social justice with no liberty. America is carrying on a tremendous experiment in liberty with no social justice.

"The second great upheaval is the challenge to capitalism. Capitalism has neglected human beings. Capitalism is facing the test of its life We are through in this age with rugged individualism. We are through with ruthless individualism. I doubt if capitalism will survive in its present forms.

"The third great titan of this upheaval is the National recovery act. The whole world looks unto this great experiment in both liberty and justice that we are carrying on to bring us into a new dawn of economic, moral and social justice. Franklin Delano Roosevelt is going to bring social justice to this Nation for the first time in its history. I am talking as a preacher, not as a politician."

Farmer Held In Hagerstown Kidnap Case

Boy Missing Since Friday Found in His Custody; Peonage Motive Seen.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Lloyd Brillhart, 30, farmer of near Pinesburg, was arrested today by local authorities, when Frank McClay, 11, son of Mrs. Mabel McClay, Hagerstown, who has been missing from his home since Friday, was found in his custody.

A warrant was issued late today charging Brillhart with "forcibly stealing, taking and carrying away Frank McClay, a male child under 16 years of age." The warrant was issued by Magistrate Harry E. Snyder and Brillhart was booked for a hearing Friday morning.

The mother reported the disappearance of young McClay to the police last Friday when he failed to return home and an alarm was broadcast over the radio. Today, the police say, they found the boy with Brillhart in the southern part of the city. The boy apparently frightened, was unable to give the police much information. The authorities are also checking on the story of Leonard Everhart, another minor, who told police that he had been enticed to Brillhart's farm to work and had run away in July.

Bureau Pleads For Stevenson

Maryland Farm Body Seeks Review of His Dismissal.

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—C. E. Wise, jr., executive secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, said today that the federation was asking a public hearing on the "summary dismissal" of George H. Stevenson as president of the Baltimore Production Credit Corporation.

Mr. Wise said letters requesting the hearing were being sent to Dr. W. I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit Administration in Washington; J. K. Doughton, chairman of the district board; Senators Goldsborough and Tydings and to all the Maryland Representatives.

"The Maryland Farm Bureau Federation," he said, "is at loss to understand the summary dismissal of Mr. Stevenson. And it is for that reason that we have asked that he be given a hearing and that the hearing be a public one.

"We feel that Mr. Stevenson is farm-minded and that in his position as head of the Production Credit Corporation, his work has been of very real benefit to the farmer in this State."

At the time of Stevenson's dismissal, Mr. Doughton, who took over his duties temporarily, was represented as saying that Stevenson had been given the opportunity to resign, but did not take it and was dismissed for the good of the service.

Dorothy was playing near her home on June 28 when her playmate kicked her. She was taken to the hospital four days later.

Jacksonville, Md., Aug. 27 (AP).—Four men were killed and one injured in a head-on crash between a 5-ton truck and a passenger car near here today. It brought to 14 the number of traffic deaths in Maryland in four days.

State police, arriving shortly after the accident, listed the dead as: Joseph Norris, 83; Milton Norris, 44, the elder Norris' nephew; Norman Seitz, 19, and Harris Tracey, 19.

The men were all from Whitehill and were occupants of the sedan, which was demolished.

Samuel Barnhart, 60, of Dallastown, Pa., received cuts and bruises and was taken to a Baltimore hospital. He was the only one of three occupants of the truck injured.

Several hundred persons gathered at the scene and traffic was tied up for an hour. Dr. Wilbur Enser, of Cockeysville, one of the first to arrive, pronounced the four men dead.

J. M. Fadely, Mason County coroner, today said falling asleep on a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad track was the cause of the death of Oden Cantor, 31, of Letart, decapitated by a train yesterday near Point Pleasant.

Scenic Highway Being Surveyed

Richmond, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Engineers of the State Highway Department are completing the survey of the Virginia section of scenic highway which the Federal Government will construct at a cost of approximately $16,500,000 to connect the Shenandoah National Park and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Henry G. Shirly, State Highway commissioner, stated today.

Main points to be touched by the Highway were located by Federal engineers and the State engineers have surveyed between these locations, mapping streams, contours and general topography. The State's surveyors are now operating in Carroll County, near the point, where the Highway will go into North Carolina.

The Highway, a PWA project, will traverse a country where scenery is without parallel in the eastern part of the United States. Cost of construction will be repaid over a long term of years by tolls.

Border Liquor Sale Big Except To Carolinians

Old North State Puzzles Virginia Officials; Distillery Built.

Richmond, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The State Alcoholic Beverage stores at Bluefield and at Bristol have been doing an abnormally heavy business because of trans-border demand, but no proportional increase has come to stores at Danville, Martinsville and South Boston, near the Carolina line.

The ABC Board can not account for the phenomenon, although it is admitted that North Carolina bootleg may have something to do with the situation.

Presumably, also, the demand is heavier near West Virginia and Tennessee because both Bluefield and Bristol have large urban populations immediately across the border, and there is no corresponding market just beyond the Carolina line.

Bluefields ABC had the largest gross of any store in Virginia last week-end. The largest Richmond store for the first time lost its laurels as the leader.

Bootleggers from West Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina are believed to be using ABC stock in their business, but there is as yet no evidence of any large-scale operations.

Carrying Legal Liquor Causes Two Arrests

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Two youths arrested by Salem officers on a charge of illegally transporting legally purchased ABC Board liquor were free on $150 bail each today while officials searched the State liquor law and supplementary ruling in an effort to fix exact charges.

In Richmond Chairman S. Heth Tyler, of the State Liquor Board, said he thought the prisoners could be held only as violators of a board ruling, but not of Section 58 of the act itself. It is under that section, and Section 62, that they were arrested.

A search of their automobile Saturday night by police revealed five gallons of liquor. The two are Henry Martin, 24, and James Martin, 21, both of Pilot, Va. The sections under which they now stand charged, and under which they will be given hearings in Salem Justice Court tomorrow, apply, Maj. Tyler said, to interstate transportation of liquor. The law forbids transportation of more than one gallon of liquor into Virginia. Within the State, however, quantities in excess of one gallon may be transported, Tyler said, on written permission of the board. Failure to secure such permission constitutes a misdemeanor if liquor is transported, he said.

Apple Distillery Being Built.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The Shenandoah Valley's first distillery is now under construction at Timberville, heart of the North Rockingham apple belt, and will be ready for operation when the present apple crop is harvested.

The plant is being erected by the Shenandoah Valley Distilling Co., Inc., which has been granted a charter by the State Corporation Commission and has obtained Federal and State licenses. Carroll H. Driver, of Timberville, is president; Victor Lancea, of Catonsville, Md., vice president, and Frank H. Driver, Timberville, secretary-treasurer. The Drivers are leading orchardists of the section. The company is capitalized at $50,000.

The distillery will be devoted to the production of apple brandy and is expected to bring thousands of dollars to the orchardists for cull apples that otherwise would go to waste. The product will be sold in other States or to the Virginia A. B. C. Board.

Distilleries are planned also in the Albemarle County, Waynesboro and Winchester fruit-producing areas. Because of hail damage in some sections this season there may be an increased number of culls.

Norfolk-Portsmouth Milk Hearings to Open

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Hearings preliminary to the drafting of regulations for the fluid milk business in the Norfolk and Portsmouth area will begin here tomorrow when Dr. T. R. Snavely, and other members of the State milk commission begin a four-day session.

They will hear suggestions from each group interested in the production, distribution or consumption of milk. Suggestions and evidence will be forged into a code to govern the business here.

Virginia Asks New System For Schools

600 Educators Attend Conference to Revise Curriculum.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 27.—Speaking today before 600 State school officials and teachers attending the curriculum revision conference here at the University of Virginia, former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, chairman of the State board of education, declared that it was the primary desire of the board to provide every boy and girl in Virginia with at least a public school education.

Opening the first session of the six-day conference called by the State department of education to consider installing new and revised courses of instruction in high and elementary schools, Mr. Trinkle lauded the administrators and teachers for "playing their part in the educational project."

He deplored the fact that "men find their way to the General Assembly who pay more attention to personal whims than to the education of the youth of the State." It is the duty of teachers to keep before parents and the general public the importance of the schooling of the child, he added.

Mr. Trinkle said he was "glad that we have as Governor a man who will stand and fight against cuts in school funds." Gov. Peery, who was scheduled to speak on today's program, was unable to be present. The conference, described as one of the most important educational gatherings ever held in the State, climaxes a three-year period of trial of the new curriculum program designed by the State department of education to meet more adequately the needs of students. Future steps will be governed by its outcome.

Virginia University Aids.

In delivering a welcoming address, Dr. Charles G. Maphis, University of Virginia summer school dean, invited members of the conference to make use of the resources of the university in working out their problems. Dr. Sydney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, who is regarded as the leading force in the revision movement, reviewed the reorganization of the State department of education three years ago, and the subsequent development of curriculum changes designed to equip students more readily to respond to conditions of life from youth to maturity.

Dr. D. W. Peters, director of instruction, State department of education, told of the favorable response that part of the program submitted to classroom trial had received. Lucy Mason Holt, president of the Virginia Education Association, urged those teachers who had expressed uncertainty in participating in the new program to "banish their fears" and join the majority, who have already experienced success, in operating it. Prof. H. L. Caswell, of George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., outlined the controlling concepts of the Virginia curriculum program and suggested methods of installation.

Others who took part in today's session included Dr. John L. Manahan, of the University of Virginia; Ruth Henderson, elementary supervisor, State Department of Education; Miss McLedge Moffett, dean of Radford Teachers College; Dr. A. M. Jarman, of the University of Virginia, and Katherine Anthony of Harrisonburg Teachers College.

Peery Investigates Crisis at Hopewell

Confers With Union Men on Relief Situation.

Richmond, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The relief crisis at Hopewell incident to the shutdown of the Tubize Chatillon Corporation's artificial silk mill was the subject of a protracted conference here today between Gov. Peery and representatives of the Hopewell local of the United Textile Workers of America.

John Hopkins Hall, commissioner of labor and industry, and William A. Smith, Virginia emergency relief director, attended the parley with officers of the Hopewell Union and George E. Moorehouse, organizer for the U. T. W. there.

The plant, employing 1,850 workers, was shut down after a walkout June 29 and the corporation later announced that it will discontinue the manufacture of rayon yarn there. Removal of some of the plant's machinery is slated to begin this week. Raymond F. Burrows, plant manager, has stated that there is no use for workers to remain in Hopewell in the hope of getting back their lost jobs.

Liberty League Seen Forced Into Politics

Ardent Roosevelt Man Flays Shouse Group as Reactionary.

(Associated Press.)

A withering arraignment of Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis by one of the chief Roosevelt aids in Congress promoted the conviction last night that the American Liberty League, whether it chooses or not, may become a factor in current political campaigns.

Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, who has been cited as a possible Administration favorite for House leadership, said "The Happy Warrior, of old has joined the disgruntled and malcontents."

The statement linked Davis with Wall street and said "he just can't understand the liberal forces that are at work in rejuvenating America."

Party Schism May Result.

Thus, the 1928 and 1924 Democratic Presidential nominees—now joined with prominent Republicans for a critical, "nonpartisan" scrutiny of the New Deal—have come under a fire potentially conducive to a schism within their party. Democratic Senators Thomas and Pope, of Oklahoma and Idaho, already had opened up on the league.

It also had not escaped notice that the commander of New Jersey Democracy, Frank Hague, pointedly became first to declare for a Roosevelt renomination in 1936. He was identified with the Smith forces as against Roosevelt at the Chicago convention.

These developments came amidst an onrush of New Deal debate that sharpened interest in tomorrow's New York meeting of the league executive committee.

Will Consider "Persons."

Unless signs fail, the gathering will be followed by emphasis on its purpose to "teach the necessity of respect for the rights of persons" as well as of property.

Smith, Davis, Representative Wadsworth and others of the committee, along with President Jouett Shouse, will have had the benefit of the National reception accorded the league since its announcement last Wednesday.

On top of that, they doubtless will have pondered reaction to the Administration contention that the organization has subordinated the general welfare to the interests of property. There was slight belief tonight that this would pass unnoticed.

It had been pointed out previously that "farmer" and "labor" divisions were to be embraced in the league as well as home owners, savings depositors, life insurance policy holders, bondholders and stockholders.

Recent Events Are Factors.

Happenings in the religious, legal, industrial and financial as well as political worlds also were considered due to receive weight in league decisions, including:

1.—The federal council of churches dispatch to 110,000 Protestant pastors of a Labor Day message terming the Administration program "of human origin and therefore fallible;" but with purposes "divine in character."

2.—The report to the American Bar Association, in convention at Milwaukee, that New Deal practices are "rapidly and seriously" undermining the judicial system.

3. The differences at Titusville, Pa., between Secretary Ickes and Axtell J. Byles, president of the Petroleum Institute. The Federal oil administrator took the position that present regulation was in the interest of "rights and liberties" of all the people and should be maintained. Byles contended the oil code was ineffective and advocated lifting of "the hand of Government from the industry."

4. The New York Guaranty Trust Co. conclusion that certain new "recovery" agencies give rise to "a real danger that those powers will be perpetuated and extended until legitimate private business is buried under a mountain of bureaucracy."

Woodrum's statement received all the more attention by reason of his closeness to the President in such crises as occasioned by the veto of the veterans-Federal salary bill last winter. The Virginian led the unsuccessful attempt to have the House sustain the veto.

He looked upon the league as an effort to embarrass the Administration by two "has-been" and a "would-be" Presidential aspirants.

Veterans Get 'Annie Oakleys' to Fights

Veterans from Walter Reed Hospital will witness the fights Monday night at Griffith Stadium which will provide funds for entertaining the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police next month. Left to right are Capt. Edward J. Kelly, E. Gilbert, Maj. Ernest W. Brown and Mrs. N. D. Shackelford, of the Red Cross.

He described Wadsworth as "an aspirant in 1936 and one of the cheer leaders for the opposition to the New Deal."

"These gentlemen protest that this movement is not unfriendly to the President," he said. "What a trio of pals! And what a big help they have been so far!"

Smith amuses himself, he went on, "by throwing monkey wrenches at the recovery bandwagon as it passes by. * * * It's too bad, and this is the gentleman whom many of us hailed as great. In his own language, 'He just couldn't take it.'"

Lawyer and Banker Will Be Buried Today.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Hugh C. Davis, 70, prominent lawyer and identified with railroads and banks, died last night.

He is survived by his widow, a son, Hugh L. Davis, and a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Davis Jaffe, wife of Louis Jaffe, editor of the Virginian Pilot. Funeral services will be at the grave in Farmville tomorrow.

Woman Is Caught In Norfolk Holdup

Police Trace Suspect by Car Used in Robbery.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Vera Maxwell, 24, was arrested here 15 minutes after she had held up a Western Union Telegraph office and taken $72 at the point of a gun.

She admitted the holdup during questioning by police, who said they found the money and a revolver in her handbag.

Identification of the lone gunwoman was made by Mrs. Mark E. Cole, who identified her in a police line-up. Mrs. Cole told officers she was alone in the office when the woman entered. She produced the revolver, Mrs. Cole said, and came behind the counter. Grabbing the money, she left the place immediately and drove away in an automobile. C. L. Ellis, express company employe, noted the car's license number and informed police, who checked the number and went to Miss Maxwell's address, where they arrested her.

Frostburg Police Win Ouster Suit

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Chief of Police Benjamin H. Thomas and Assistant Chief August Kreider will continue in office at Frostburg under a ruling just handed down in the Circuit Court by Judges D. Lindley Sloan and Albert A. Doub, that the officers were illegally dismissed by the Mayor and City Council of Frostburg.

They are civil service appointees and the writ of mandamus is sustained to prevent their being removed from office.

Friends of the discharged officers declared they had been removed for political reasons by the new administration to make room for August Sweitzer and Harry Fuller, who had been appointed. The defendants contended the appointments of Thomas and Kreider had been probationary.

Erratic Recovery.

Donald R. Richberg's summary of economic gains during the last year and a half is truly impressive. The public is, of course, aware of the fact that the country has taken long steps forward since the banking holiday of March, 1933. Improvement has extended to many fronts. When all of these gains are brought together in a single report they form a basis for real gratification.

According to Mr. Richberg's figures (which are only an estimate) 4,120,000 jobless men have gone back to work since March, 1933. Weekly wages have advanced 37.5 per cent, although that is offset in part by a 9.6 per cent increase in the cost of living. Corporation profits have likewise shown notable improvement, and business failures are fewer by more than 40 per cent. The index of industrial production, Mr. Richberg points out, "rose from a low of 47.4 in March, 1933, to a high of 85.1 in July, 1933, and then after a dip to 59.4 in November, 1933, rose again to 72.1 in May, 1934, since which time there has been another recession."

It is significant that the highest point of economic activity under the New Deal was reached during the speculative boom in the summer of 1933. That is the period during which the dollar was undergoing devaluation and manufacturers were rushing to turn out large volumes of goods before the codes could become effective. The subsequent slump was followed by a slow and seemingly more secure climb, which in turn has now given way to another set-back. This has at least a striking coincidence with the application of unnecessary obstacles to desirable regulation of the capital issues market.

Contacting Mexico.

Stuart Chase started it all. He and Mrs. Chase, tired of life in America, sojourned a while in Mexico. The holiday turned into a book. The book, a sort of glorified travelogue which depicted our lively neighbor as a country where happiness and play and colorful holidays were the major parts of life, made America "Mexico-conscious." Mexico seized upon the opportunity. Although it still remained a country of agriculture and handicraft it learned the ways of a machine-made culture. Like primitive Vermont and coastwise Maine it began advertising its simple charms. Naturally, America came to see.

Unfortunately, while the charms are indubitably there, the country appears to be like certain picnic grounds: beautiful, but overrun with ants. Among the "Letters to the Editor" today, Mrs. Gertrude Trowbridge, an able observer, points out some of the disadvantages of visiting the country. It appears that Mexico had not as much faith in the drawing power of advertising as it should have had. It blazoned forth the reasons why one should come there on a vacation—but it forgot that Americans like to sleep in beds and eat at tables. More people came than it was possible to care for.

Naturally the tourists have become resentful. Having to sleep in Pullman cars would make any one resentful. But perhaps the American habit of making one's annoyance loudly known will have a salutary effect. Mrs. Trowbridge says that the government itself is annoyed at the unfortunate annoyance and is taking steps to make Mexico more enjoyable.

No doubt within another year there will be gasoline stations everywhere. Bar-B-Q stands, overnight camps, cabins with hot and cold water, signs announcing that Porfirio Diaz tamales are on sale at the next house to the left. And when that happens Stuart Chase can rewrite his book—if he has the nerve.

Save The Boardwalk!

Every summer the Black and Blue forces meet in what is coyly called "mythical warfare." Just now Atlantic City is lying in ruins, the Black Fleet having appeared out of nowhere and annihilated the Blue Army, or the other way around. It is all very confusing. One would suppose, for instance, that any intelligent enemy of this country would want to leave Atlantic City exactly as it is.

Generals and major generals sit in offices mapping the thing out. The purpose, of course, is to see whether, in event of war, the United States would be able to defend itself against attack. In less belligerent years than this, the defenders have always been able to safeguard the cultural heritage which Atlantic City exemplifies. But all that is changed and we have only to close our eyes to visualize the Boardwalk as a mass of hypothetical splinters. The vandals will threaten Coney Island next!

We would not go so far as to add up two and two. But on the very day that the Boardwalk went up in mythical flames and the Traymore, the Shelburne, and the Breakers were crumbled into mythical masses of wreckage, it was announced that more construction and more men would be asked from Congress. Perhaps the case is well founded. But think of pinning it on the preservation of Atlantic City!

Irreconcilable.

Behind the impending textile strike lies a sharp conflict of reasoning which soon or late, in the operation of the recovery program, was bound to lead to a major industrial crisis. The issue has been present in other recent labor disputes, but is much more clearly posed, and much more the central problem, in the present controversy than has been the case elsewhere.

Briefly put, the union contention is that since the 40-hour week established under NRA has failed to cure unemployment in the industry, working hours should now be further decreased without reductions in pay. The basic theory is that of spreading the work available—which seemingly is assumed to be a constant factor—among as large a number of employes as possible. Fundamentally it is the same argument that has often animated organized labor in opposing the introduction of labor-saving machinery.

The employers' contention, on this issue, is that after a certain point the shortening of hours will increase rather than spread employment. That point is reached if labor costs push prices to a level where production is curtailed for lack of orders from consumers.

The validity of this general argument would seem to be clear to anybody. But there is room for debate as to the percentage of the gross return which can safely be paid in wages, and the percentage which should go into equipment, profits and other charges on the industry. The unions have much evidence to show that wages do not expand as rapidly as profits. It does not follow, however, that wages can be arbitrarily kept up when profits cease.

The textile unions will have a hard time to impress the public with the justice of their 30-hour week demand, largely because they are unable to prove that this is a workable solution for the industry's problems. On the whole, codification has worked strongly for the interests of labor in the textile industry. Such hardships as have arisen would seem to be due more to consumer resistance to higher prices than to continued industrial abuses. And to try to remedy the latter by further restricting textile markets would seem, from the viewpoint of labor, very shortsighted tactics.

The unions have other grievances—the undesirable stretch-out system and the perennial question of recognition. Both of these should be susceptible of peaceful adjustment. But the basic issue of whether an industry can be forced to continue operations at costs which management sincerely believes would be ruinous is neither susceptible of arbitration, nor soluble by direct action.

At Ehrenbreitstein.

Since the Versailles treaty placed the Saar Basin territory under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations that body has been faced with few more delicate problems of administration than the carrying out of the plebiscite scheduled for next January. At that time the electorate, numbering some 800,000 people, will themselves decide the political future of the territory. If Sunday's greeting of Herr Hitler is any indication of actual sentiment, return to Germany may be expected.

Although the address was delivered amidst all the planned pomp and ceremony that usually attends a well-arranged public appearance of Der Fuehrer, the foreign correspondents present under the frowning fortress of Ehrenbreitstein were impressed by the manner in which the huge crowd greeted the German Chancellor. Nearly 160,000 Saarlanders, brought across the border from the plebiscite territory to Coblenz, were seemingly in a mood most receptive to the Chancellor's speech, in which he promised forgiveness to those political "criminals"—Socialists, Catholic Centrists and Communists—if they will vote for Germany on plebiscite day.

Except for a few radicals, the residents of the Basin have never felt otherwise than friendly to the Fatherland. After all, by culture, race and tradition, the Saarlanders are thoroughly German. It is a natural inclination to wish to return to the fold. But the new Germany is not the one from which they were divorced. It is now Hitler's Germany. And, under League control, there has been freedom of press and expression in the Saar.

Naturally those who availed themselves of the free rides to Coblenz were not anti-Hitlerites. But their number was many. How strong the opposition may be, there has been no way yet of telling. If, next January, the Saar rejects the protective wing of the League, escapes from the influence of France, and willingly becomes a part of Nazi Germany, it will be one of the most significant events in modern history. For it will not be a dominated "election." It will be an open and voluntary acceptance of dictatorial rule.

Of The Making Of Lists.

William Lyon Phelps, who writes for us daily on the page opposite, is at it again. In other words, he has just made another list. Dr. Phelps is one of the greatest list-makers in the land. If he is not picking out the 100 best books of all time, or the ten best books for a desert island, he is choosing the best books of the current year. Although the year is far from over, he has already decided that 1934 is one of the most notable of recent publishing years and has selected its outstanding products. Some day Dr. Phelps will depart from his mansion on Hyperbole Heights and name for us some books that are no good; perhaps a list of the world's worst 100 books of all time. Then would the millennium be upon us.

The undying graciousness of spirit shown by the professor-emeritus is more kindly than critical. Here, even before the fall season of book publishing is two-thirds finished, he has found some 34 titles worthy of his commendation. Eleven of these 34 are novels. They range from "a work of literary art" ("So Red the Rose," by Stark Young) to the undescribed "Thank You, Jeeves," by the harried Mr. Wodehouse, Inc. In the heart of the huddle is the Pulitzer Prize winner of last winter. Do you remember its title? Among the nonfiction is a book by Nicholas Murray Butler, which gives you an idea of the catholicity of Dr. Phelps' mind.

It would be a good idea if Dr. Phelps' innumerable lists were collected and printed upon vellum so that the titles of many of the volumes he has so unstintedly praised might be preserved for posterity. Our literary historians of the future would then have, along with a few really good books, an indication of what the great middle class read during Dr. Phelps' long regime as Der Schriftstellerich Fuehrer. But the adjectivial descriptions these same historians might impose, would, we wager, be less grandiloquent than those so gracefully and ubiquitously employed by the only American ever to admit having read through "The Faery Queene."

The Lawyers Reflect.

Wherever lawyers meet these days they will be found discussing questionable trends in our system of government. And this is the more significant because from the viewpoint of increased business, due to the complexity of the New Deal, the profession has few material grounds for complaint. Its criticisms are detached, objective and scientific rather than inspired by individual interest.

A report by the committee on administrative law of the American Bar Association flatly accuses the authorities at Washington of "rapidly and seriously" undermining the judicial branch of the Government. The committee fears that judicial functions are being confused with executive and legislative acts to the detriment of our constitutional balance of powers. To avert this tendency it recommends creation of a Federal administrative court, or independent tribunals similar to the Board of Tax Appeals. Judicial questions which are now decided by various alphabetical agencies would be submitted to this court.

The committee has raised an important issue which sooner or later must be faced. Confusion arising from the exercise of both executive and judicial functions by numerous boards, commissions and authorities will probably tend to become more acute as the activities of these organizations are extended. Whether or not a special court is created, it is clear that some steps will be necessary to simplify the adjudication of individual rights under the recovery program.

In a second recommendation, however, the committee seems much less happy in its reasoning. This calls for abolition of the so-called independent commissions. Presumably this reference is to the Communications, Tariff, Interstate Commerce, Federal Trade and Power Commissions, etc. The legal experts would like to see the administrative functions of these bodies transferred to the regular executive departments and their judicial functions to the courts.

One of the outstanding reasons for intrusting special administrative powers to agencies of this kind was to remove them from the sphere of political influence. A regular department of the Government might find it very difficult, for example, to grant radio broadcasting licenses with strict impartiality. Tariff fact-finding by any group under the direct influence of a Cabinet officer would be assailed as partisan.

It is true, of course, that of late the independent character of these commissions has been seriously undermined by the dismissal of some members who did not agree with the President. Yet they remain an important part of the Government's administrative machinery. Imperfect though the bipartisan commissions may be, it does not appear that any more satisfactory means of control over enterprises having a special public interest has been devised. The problem is to make these agencies more and not less independent of politics.

Radio Progress.

Ardent devotees of the radio who are inclined to the belief that it is a great educative medium will be shocked at the irreverence shown broadcasting by one T. R. Carskaden who is author of an amusing if not terrifying account of the latest indication of progress in this industry. In the New Republic he writes:

"Is your nuptial couch as yet a dream; has a once fond fireside bliss degenerated into a series of unwilling grunts from a boorish spouse; or are you just plain wild and willing, with no takers? Do not despair," he says, "The agency that brings Wayne King for your face, Rudy Vallee for your liver, and Father Coughlin for your soul, will not fail you now. Radio will provide Your Lover."

Three times a week from Radio City over WEAF, Mr. Carskaden reports, this lover's soft voice lilts as follows: "Fair Lady, have you a few minutes for someone who thinks you are the loveliest girl in the world? . . . Lean over here close to your radio a minute . . . close to me . . . just as if I could look into your lovely eyes . . . scent the perfume of your hair . . . caress the velvety softness of your cheek . . . darling . . .," &c., ad nauseum.

He goes under the title of Your Lover, super, simpering salesman for cosmetics. He talks, he sings, he philosophizes, he chats personally and with homely details, and then gets back to his main theme: ". . . Darling . . . what are we going to call your radio here? . . . our trysting place? . . . our rendezvous? . . . You're so sweet . . . Do you think you'll have a quarter hour for me here tomorrow? . . . I'll be at your radio here . . . my shrine . . . where I worship the loveliest girl in the world . . ."

Yes, radio is a great educative medium!

Phooey!

Another employment credit which should be chalked up for the Administration is the number of stamp collectors it has put back on full time.

The average man walks eight miles a day, a statistician tells us. Yes—mostly in circles.

Mexican Style Touring.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is an almost war-time discomfort for American tourists, stuck in Mexico at this time, largely through their own fault, because they did not make reservations ahead. Many sleep in Pullman cars and forage for meals in crowded restaurants and hotels that take advantage of the situation by nearly doubling their prices. To many tourists this sudden increase in what they must pay is a calamity, far beyond their calculations. They long to get out of Mexico, but must prolong their stay until they can get transportation.

The Mexican government is honestly trying to prevent extortion, wherever possible, watching taxi drivers and patrolling roads to inquire of tourists if touring car men are overcharging. But the most frequented hotels are run by foreigners who are less fair. Discontent is beginning to be loudly expressed by victims of this imposition, for nearly all of them have budgeted closely and can not afford extra expense. They will publish widely at home (if they ever get there) this unethical surprise.

GERTRUDE S. TROWBRIDGE.

"Maudlin Sentiment? No!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Emory F. Ladd, in his article "Is Japan Our Enemy," published in The Post of August 19, states that most of the grievances of the American people against Japan are in large part imaginary; that they take it for granted that the Japanese have been completely in the wrong about their Manchurian policy and their aggression at Shanghai in 1932.

Although I am not, like Mr. Ladd, an expert on Oriental affairs, I venture to assert that the American people are well informed as to the essential facts of the Sino-Japanese controversy, and that they are profoundly convinced that the Japanese have not been justified in their acts of aggression against China. Furthermore, they are persuaded that the Japanese have no sincere regard for their covenanted word in treaties in which they are a signatory power.

A perusal of the leading American publications fails to reveal any favorable reaction whatever to the arguments advanced by Mr. Ladd and others of Japanese sympathies. On the contrary, there is widespread disapproval of every new act of aggression and of every new and unjustified claim of right by Japan.

This estimate of American opinion is not based upon the reactions of a gagged or biased press. The American press is militant and active. Through its influential papers, it presents to its readers both sides of any public question; in its editorials the opinions of the people are reflected and fearlessly expressed.

This, it is not mere maudlin sentiment that prompts the American people to favor China. They realize that Japan's assumption of the responsibility for maintaining the peace of the Orient means that she regards as a threat to that peace any obstacle placed by any other power in the way of the realization of her imperialistic ambitions; that, regardless of existing international agreements solemnly and freely entered into, she will have her own way on Asiatic soil.

The Japanese claim that the world does not understand what Mr. Ladd calls their "antipodal psychological processes." It is, indeed, impossible to comprehend the frame of mind or code of ethics of a people who claim to be civilized, when we consider their conduct in disregarding all the fundamental principles of international right and justice.

For the Old Order.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There have been many investigations recently on religion, to determine the role that it is playing in our lives. Each leads us to a different angle of the subject as we pass the various geographical lines. It is doubtful whether it is well to conclude on the religious temperament of the people of a certain geographical area of this country after reading these reports, because only one group in each case is taken into consideration. However, it is my opinion that the general moral and religious temperament of the American people as a whole is not of the caliber of the religious ideals of a half century ago.

First, the moral ideals of the American home have degenerated into many disunited and, perhaps, unsound systems. There is no uniformity of belief among the members of the family as to what is morality. The older members of the family are reluctant not to be the last to throw away the old, and the younger members, with the same degree of eagerness, are desirous of trying the new. And so there exists many conflicting attitudes which color the home with grave discord. The reason for this is perhaps that the older members are slow in adapting themselves to new environments produced by our new "modern" morals.

Then, again, the peace-loving atmosphere of the last generation's home, colored as it was with a religious spirit that produced unity within the home, is totally lacking. Say what you may about the faults or virtues of religion as an indispensable factor in the home, it has been an important factor in stabilizing the home, and has kept weak people in the realm of social, moral behavior.

I am of the new generation. However, I am partial to the religious beliefs of the older generation.

Posterity will discover very readily that the decline of spiritual ideals was a fundamental cause for our crime record, and the eventual decline of the home.

We Have No "Persuasion."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to congratulate you for the very excellent character which you have given to The Post in the short period of the new ownership. After three months of sampling the Washington dailies, I have settled down on The Post as meeting most nearly my ideal of a daily paper.

I find there is in Washington a quite general opinion that the character of The Post has been greatly raised under the new direction. The editorials have been keen, constructive, courageous and fair, and your list of special writers includes some enviable names. Although I am a Democrat by nature and bent, I feel that merit in a newspaper of the opposite persuasion should be acknowledged and praised, and for that reason alone I am sending you this note.

Modernize Our Traffic Signals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much criticism appears, from time to time, in the Nation's press of the multiplicity and lack of coordination of traffic signals as a major contribution to "congestion" and accidents.

Now comes a protestant who claims:

1. Traffic signals protect neither motorist nor pedestrian.

2. Increased traffic fatalities follow signal installations.

Therefore, oust the traffic lights for more street lights.

Now I hold some sympathy for this misinformant. True, signal lights offer only cautionary protection if their indications are violated.

In a survey by the writer in New York City, of tens of thousands of pedestrian crossings, up to two-thirds of these were found to cross through traffic against the red "stop" signals, depending upon their duration.

Of course, traffic accidents will rise rapidly with long stop intervals or poorly coordinated signals, such as still exist in most cities—that is, absence of the "wave" system with signals timed in step or sequence along the streets so that traffic can progress at a steady speed without being stopped every block or two.

This system can be designed to provide adequate cross intervals for pedestrians crossing any street and the steady speed checks auto speeding and lagging behind, both of them sources of great danger to traffic and pedestrians.

Steady speed makes the safest and best time in transportation and motoring. But this requires skillful engineering design and accurate timing of all signals. It is the constant stopping of traffic at independent signals out of step or having no time relation to each other along the thoroughfares which encourages "jumping signals" by irate motorists who then become careless and more prone to accidents.

Few realize that "congestion" results far more from stops than from the actual number of vehicles on the street. When the streets are organized by adequate progressive signal systems, with reasonable traffic enforcement, the congestion largely vanishes. This point is worth emphasis because this city has long been under stress of Congressional demand for installing many signals here, there and everywhere without providing for the slight extra expense of properly coordinating them.

Today the perfecting of the signal system is far more important than installing new ones, independently operated out of step with each other.

This writer believes and has recommended, after comprehensive survey, that city funds, first available, would be much better applied first for this purpose than adding more independent signals to the network. In fact, in some locations there are too many now for efficient waving, which could be better moved elsewhere.

The economic effect of delays is more important to public transport—street cars and buses—which handle the great majority of workers, especially in rush hours. Thus, increasing from four stops to eight stops per mile decreases the average speeds of street cars by 4½ to 5 miles per hour. Motor buses, taxicabs and autos, with lesser power, are still more sensitive to stops. These autos pile up in the terminal districts and block the powered vehicles and we are late to work or dinner.

Obviously the proposed new high-powered street cars can be of relatively little advantage unless street conditions are improved to enable them to function properly. Don't oust the signals, but modernize them for maximum service with traffic regulation to give them a fair chance.

The Post Impressionist

Who Is Ernst, Who Is He?

Postoffice, Tuesday.

WHATEVER you may think of Austria's Augean Stables and the contending proposals for cleaning them—or making them worse—you must be nearly willing to admit, by this time, that at least the most energetic Hercules upon the scene is Vice-Chancellor Prince Ernst Ruediger von Starhemberg, the Heimwehr hegumen. If you read Lothrop Stoddard's Monday Post piece about this Vice-Chancellor's plans to restore the Hapsburgs, you must be quite willing to admit it. And if you read the eminently educative editorial appearing coincidently therewith, you have probably made the admission already.

But the curious thing about Prince Ernst is that, for all his militant masculinity, he shares a certain personal shyness with Shakespeare's Sylvia. Like her he either has no press-agent or else has ordered that literary minion to lay off the private stuff.

We all know what he is doing on the surface. We are all pretty well aware of what he is trying to do beneath it. Yet few of us know enough about the man and the man's history to understand what has made him do the one and try to do the other.

Here, then, are at all events a few revealing flashes.

Upper Austria is the home of Austria's most ancient traditions, and Upper Austria has been for centuries the home of the Starhembergs. They have, or had, more than 20 castles strewn around the old Austro-Hungarian Monarchy's dominions, but the biggest and oldest of them was their Upper Austrian Danubian castle near Linz.

There, on an enormous estate, hundreds of servants lived and served, "wearing the princely colors, snapping to attention every time a member of the family passed." There prevailed the social-patriarchal system. There survived and ruled all the memories of mediaevalism. There hung, ready for instant use, the Toledo blade of "Turk-Beater" von Starhemberg, and above it hung the darkening portrait of that Count von Starhemberg himself, who, in 1683, challenged Christendom's enemy, Kara Mustapha Pasha.

Well, then, there also Ernst von Starhemberg was born thirty-five years ago.

This accounts for a lot. The fact that the World War ended too soon for handsome Ernst to get much soldiering accounts for more: a strong, romantic spirit thwarted.

"When the debacle came," says Emil Lengyel, writing in Current History, "sadness settled like a fog on the Starhemberg castles. Vienna was in the hands of . . . the Social Democrats, who appeared (to Ernst) as the wreckers of the civilization his ancestor had saved."

Besides, he had a mother who, as so frequently happens in such families, was more for the family ideals than even the family itself. Ernst loved her. He probably also feared her. He certainly respected her. Well, she was a member of the Christian Social Party, sworn enemy of socialism—indeed, she "became one of its vice presidents." Of course, "both she and her son were hundred per cent schwarzgelb (black and yellow), the colors of the imperial banner. They decided that, if the socialist menace was to be banished, the Hapsburgs had to be brought back."

However zealous though they were, this pair could not think the moment ripe. So the Prince set out, like any Round Table knight-errant, in quest of chivalrous adventure. He served with those irregulars who sought to seize Upper Silesia from the Poles. Then, having drunk of Munich's Pierian Beer-Spring, he joined the ill-starred Beerhall Putsch of Hitler.

Disappointed there, Ernst returned to Austria just when the Guelph and Ghibelline fashion of private armies was in process of revival. The Tyrol, as Lengyel notes, "had formed the Heimwehr as a protest against the transfer of South Tyrol to Italy . . . Carinthia had formed the Heimatschutz."

Now, with the South Tyrol's fate and Carinthia's definitely decided, "the Heimwehr had to dedicate themselves to some other cause"—and there was Ernst to lead them, and there was Ernst to tell them that those Social Democrats who ran Vienna were both a national and "an international danger." He was rich, and he spent freely. He forever turned his back on Hitlerism and cultivated his legitimist dreams—for the realization of which he was building an organizaton that seemed to grow with every mere wave of his wand.

There, then, you are:

The boy that inherited an ancient loyalty. The young man that dedicated himself to it. The adventurer in foreign parts whose home-ambitions were only made the stronger by his alien disillusionments.

The rest is recent history; it is the Vice-Chancellor who may yet—

Dollfuss had genuine political ability. Fey, his Minister of Security, had ruthlessness. In Lengyel's opinion, Starhemberg has neither "of these characteristics to large degree"—a statement which the Post-Impressionist is mildly inclined to doubt, in so far as it has to do with political ability—"but he has fixity of purpose." Therewith we do agree!

Probably the remaining Spiessbuergers still smilingly believe that "the young Prince is marching against the Vienna cafes at the head of the village taverns."

To be quite frank, we simply can't sit still on such a hypothetical bench. To us it looks uncommoniy as if the Prince's march, and that of those village taverns, was drawing near an end—and as if this end might just possibly be their destination.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

COPENHAGEN, Denmark—Dear Aleck: Just about the time I had come to the conclusion that Copenhagen, or rather Denmark, was the perfect state, Aleck, I find that they have politicians—and their unavoidable, concomitant, newspaperman. It was a big disappointment, Aleck. I had thought that here was one country that had found needful work for all its people—that there were so many people who produced food and others who rendered service necessary to the body weal for which they were given the surplus foodstuffs.

BARGERON

But it seems that even in this civilization, Aleck, it was found after all arrangements for living had been made, that there were a lot of people left over, people who would not fit into the cross-puzzle of existence. So they did what all other people have done—created a class known as politicians and with them, of course, go newspapermen.

I did not know this until after having gone through a lot of subterannean exhibits of the natural resources of the country I came out on the floor of a building on which I could hear loud and passionate voices. I sauntered hither and what should I find but the upper house of the Denmark Congress, whatever they call it. There was only one difference, Aleck, between it and our Congress. The Lower House is really low in comparison with the Upper House. That is to say it is on a lower floor. Our Lower House has never admitted its lowness, so you can imagine, Aleck, what a time we would have in placing it on a floor lower than that on which the Senate holds forth.

There were the innumerable offices with their clerks and senators' secretaries, undoubtedly telling constituents that they would get them fixed up for a job; there were men hanging around the corridors who looked for all the world like our lobbyists, or the "legislative representatives" of this and that enterprise, and, Aleck, there were what Senator Fess calls the newspaper boys who, just as they do in Washington, would walk into the gallery and grin knowingly at the senators on the floor.

Apparently, all over the world they are in a conspiracy, these newspaper boys and the senators, to bunk the public. It's an international racket, Aleck. Anyway, the fellows I saw, you could tell, were Denmark's confidantes of big men, as we like to call ourselves.

* * * *

They had some women, at least two, in the Senate, too, Aleck, though I don't know whether they were carrying on in the place of their husbands or not. Just like our American women Congressmen they simply sat there and said nothing.

One old boy was surely raising cain, though. I think it was about the farmers not getting a square deal. I know he quoted a lot of agricultural statistics. Honestly, Aleck, I saw the counterparts of Borah, of Huey Long, of Thomas, of Joe Robinson and Jimmy Byrnes. The presiding officer was different. He stayed awake. The reading clerk reminded me for all the world of Pat Haltigan, of our House of Representatives.

* * * *

In one respect, however, Aleck, the Danish Parliament far excelled ours. They had a system of chain or circulating elevators by which the elevators kept moving all the time and one would step on and off of them as he saw fit. Of course, this would not do for us, because in the first place they are entirely too fast and, secondly, they displace a lot of patronage in the way of elevator operators.

Nevertheless, Aleck, I am heartbroke or greatly disappoint as we French say. If Denmark has politicians to make laws then it must have lawyers to unmake them.

No country supporting these two parasitic classes, along with the newspapermen, can be the perfect state, Aleck.

Dog Law Adopted In Augusta County

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The new Augusta County dog law, prohibiting owners of the animals from allowing them to run at large, will go into effect September 1 and will be rigidly enforced, according to Game Warden Jack Todd.

The board of supervisors made this ruling after receiving a report which placed the known damage done in this county by dogs this year at $2,806.13. A survey showed that 456 sheep had been killed, valued at $2,550.90; 366 turkeys, valued at $219.13, and numbers of geese, chickens and hogs.

Stray dogs have also been responsible for destroying quantities of wild life, especially the young in the spring.

Gambrill Will Address Bladensburg Democrats

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of the Fifth Maryland Congressional District, a candidate for reelection, will be the principal speaker at an outing to be held September 8 by the Bladensburg District Democratic Club at the Capitol Airport on River road near Bladensburg.

Robert W. McCullough, candidate for state's attorney, also will speak.

Safety Meeting Called.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Announcement is made by Clarence L. Jarrett, State commissioner of labor, that a State safety conference will be held October 18 and 19 here.

New Dealists Watch Ballot in California

Victory by Sinclair Today Might Cost Democrats All of State's Seats in House; Mississippi and South Carolina Also Vote.

By Elliott Thurston.

California, Mississippi and South Carolina hold primary elections today, but New Deal eyes are fixed upon California. There, Upton Sinclair, life-long Socialist who espouses the New Deal, may capture the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Betting odds are that he will win. And if he does, President Roosevelt, who has refused to intercede in behalf of George Creel, publicity chief of the Wilson regime and until recently NRA administrator for California, will face a serious dilemma. He can not back Sinclair without backing outright Socialism. Failure to support the Democratic nominee would just about put the finishing touches on Democratic hopes not only of capturing the governorship but of saving seats in the House.

The California political sages predict that Sinclair's nomination would be followed by a bolt of all conservative Democrats. They figure that as many as 40 per cent of the Democratic registrants would vote for a Republican rather than for a Socialist for Governor, and that the exodus would cost the Democrats most if not all of the 11 House seats they had, out of the total of 20, in the last Congress.

Sinclair, Creel in Lead.

The race in the Democratic primary for the Governorship nomination is between Socialist Sinclair and Creel, though Justus S. Wardell, veteran Democratic wheelhorse; Milton K. Young, Democratic nominee for Governor in 1930, and Dr. Z. T. Malaby, former Democratic State chairman, were also entered in the competition. Creel's champions appealed in vain for Roosevelt's support against Sinclair. Straw votes have shown Sinclair well ahead, Creel trailing, the others far behind. Even money was being offered last week that Sinclair would win by 15,000 votes over Creel.

Sinclair's triumph would set the stage for a ferocious November battle between socialism and conservatism. The atmosphere is still surcharged as an aftermath of the San Francisco general strike—and the raids of "vigilantes" upon Communists and radicals. It would rise to a feverish degree with Sinclair threatening to capture the Governorship. He has espoused the New Deal because of its "forgotten man" thesis. He would expand the New Deal into his own concept of utopia.

In a book, "I, Governor of California, and How I Ended Poverty," Sinclair has set forth how, by 1938, he would achieve his dream.

Wants "Economic Islands."

He is for colonies of the unemployed—"economic islands"—where the workers would take over factories and everything else for their own benefit. An initial bond issue of $300,000,000 and other sums, raised by bond issues, by heavy income, inheritance and land taxes, would subsidize the venture. Precisely how a capitalistic system to pay the bills would exist beside his socialistic system is not entirely clear. At all odds, Sinclair apparently has captured the imagination of large numbers of voters. He has made an amazing showing so far.

His slogan, "End Poverty in California," derived from his book, has been alphabetically abbreviated, in New Deal fashion, to EPIC, which seems to be a magic word with which to captivate the public fancy.

His candidacy points up sharply the claimed or imagined kinship between the New Deal and the Socialist drift which the newly formed American Liberty League is organized to combat. The California situation presents an acute embarrassment for the Administration should Sinclair win, because indorsement of Sinclair would spread alarm and revolt all through Democratic ranks in all parts of the country. A hands-off attitude would leave the Administration open to the suspicion of support. Repudiation would probably make certain the loss of the governorship as well as of the delegation in Congress.

Johnson Has Easy Race.

That Hiram Johnson will capture all of the senatorial nominations, including the Democratic, was a foregone conclusion when the New Deal specifically gave him its blessing. The erstwhile Republican, Bull Mooser and Progressive is unopposed for the Democratic designation, has two minor rivals for the Republican and will walk off with the Progressive and Commonwealth party honors.

In the Republican camp, Gov. Frank F. Merriam, who succeeded the late Gov. James Rolph, jr., just in time to have a hand in fighting the general strike, appeared to have a slight advantage over former Gov. C. C. Young for the Republican nomination for Governor. Also in the contest are Raymond L. Haight, a former State official, and John R. Quinn, chairman of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

Business interests liked the way Merriam faced the strike predicament. A battle this fall between Sinclair and Merriam would be a straight-out fight between Socialism and conservatism.

Record in Registration.

California's tense political interest is evidenced by the fact that more voters are registered in more parties than ever before. Democrats showed an unprecedented registration, topping the Republicans who for a quarter of a century have had many more registrants. The registration totals were: Democrat, 1,494,111; Republican, 1,418,828; Socialist, 12,012; Prohibition, 9,443; Progressive, 4,128; Commonwealth, 3,016; Communist, 977.

By all the signs this should be a year of Democratic triumph in California, but the Sinclair adoption of the New Deal as a road to his Socialist goal presents an extraordinary situation. Today's outcome in California is of far greater moment to the New Deal than the results in any of the year's primeries.

Mississippi's primary today is, as usual, the equivalent of election. Senator Hubert D. Stephens, who has angled for White House support with the able assistance of Senator Pat Harrison, is competing for the senatorial nomination against Representative Ross Collins, Former Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo and State Senator Frank Harper. Collins, whose supporters were much irked at the Stephens maneuvers and suspected the White House of going back on a promise of neutrality, is bidding for the soldier vote by advocating immediate payment of the bonus, against which Stephens voted. As for the spectacular Bilbo, he is promising the voters that he will back Huey Long off the front pages if elected.

Dry Fight in South Carolina.

South Carolina offers a scene of conflict over whether the State shall permit the sale of liquor—legally. But this citadel of aridity is expected to follow the dry lead of Mississippi. Hence, the odds are that Olin D. Johnston, dry of Spartanburg, who came within 500 votes of beating Gov. Blackwood in the second primary of 1930, will emerge on top in the race for the governorship. Johnston began his career as a sweeper at 25 cents a day in a cotton mill.

Opposing him for the governorship is the former Governor and former Senator, Cole Blease, who was the Senate's most vivid figure next to Tom Heflin and before Huey Long. Blease is from wet Charleston. A third aspirant is Thomas B. Pearce, former State Senator, of Columbia, now chairman of the State PWA board. If the dry vote is sufficiently split Blease may come through.

All three States are also nominating for the House. But none of the contests takes rank with the governorship battle in the Democratic primary in California. There is a truly epic issue.

Police Raid House At Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Local officers broke up what was to have been a party for local colored men late last night when they swooped down on a house and seized five men, four cases of home brew, one gallon of whisky, four decks of cards and two sets of dice.

After breaking down the door to enter the house, the officers were forced to chase several of the men who had jumped from a second-story window. Three others escaped.

Those arrested on gambling charges included Harry Roman, Venning Johnson, Ed Pendleton and John Christianson, while Preston Williams, who occupied the house, will have more serious charges placed against him.

Mrs. Nola A. Thomas Buried at Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Nola A. Thomas, 72, widow of the late Elisha Thomas, who died Friday night at her home here, were held yesterday.

Mrs. Thomas is survived by the following children: Frank Thomas, of Roanoke; Edward L. Thomas, of Hopewell; Mrs. Fred Keller, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. O. E. Hawkins and Misses Ida, Susie and Willie Thomas, of this city.

Train Service Withdrawn.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Another eastern panhandle train service has fallen before increased motor traffic, authority having been granted the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad by the State public service commission to discontinue its operation of passenger trains between Romney and Green Spring, W. Va.

Mrs. Farmer Rides the Storm

Her desperate plight has not broken the spirit of the farmer's wife. In the face of terrible adversity, she is calm, without bitterness. Hardly knowing where the next meal is to come from, she yet manages to be well-groomed, well-informed. The old-time hayseed type is extinct, and Calamity Janes are as scarce as dodo birds.

Interviewing Miss Grace Frysinger, senior Home Economist of the Department of Agriculture's extension service, Virginia Lee Warren vividly describes how the country woman of today is meeting—and defeating—poverty.

Specials From the Caddies' Strike.

("One hundred and seventy-five caddies strike for more pay."—News item.)

Striking caddies at the Ambrosia Hills Country Club today mobbed Willis Crutch as he was lining up a 14-foot putt on the fifth green and beat up his caddie. Mr. Crutch was so unnerved that his hands trembled visibly and he sank his putt! He was so delighted that he indorsed the strike.

* * * *

"Red" Atwood and "Slim" Wicketts, while caddying on the fourth fairway today, were forced to drop their bags by a committee of strikers. They dropped them with such force that Col. Mason Sponks, one of the players, dubbed his approach.

* * * *

The demands of the striking caddies at Ambrosia Hills were summed up in a statement this noon as follow:

1. All answers to "Is there a roll there, boy?" "Can I reach it with a No. 2 iron?" and "Did you get the line?" to be optional.

2. No reply whatever to be compulsory to the question, "What am I doing?"

3. All searches for a lost wooden tee to be limited to 15 minutes.

* * * *

A club committee met with the striking caddies late today. Addison O. Plootz, vice president of the club, acted as spokesman for the committee. "Spuds" McGonigle spoke for the caddies. A stenographic report of the meeting follows:

Mr. Plootz—Boys, let's be reasonable.

Voice from a caddy—And that's the guy that wanted me to swim the lake to recover a 35-cent ball!

Mr. Plootz—Caddying is, after all, pleasant work. It affords you an opportunity to make some money without toil.

McGonigle—How about that time you made me climb up the side of a barn to get your ball out of a bird's nest?

* * * *

Mr. Plootz—Golf is a gentleman's game . . .

Mr. Plootz—It gives you a chance to associate with the big men of the community.

McGonigle—In their smallest moments!

Mr. Plootz—It affords you an opportunity to watch the club members and see how the game should be played!

The caddies (in unison)—Awah-h-h-h! Awah-h-h-h!

The Forgotten Dan.

"If business courage were equal to the business statistics we would be in need of controlling a boom"—Daniel Roper, Secretary of Commerce. But you can't work up courage by the use of mirrors.

Al Capone, Public Enemy No. 1, has been sent to Alcatraz Island from Atlanta. What bothers him is that he was given away in midseason and not even regarded as important enough to figure in a trade.

The Washington Monument, 555 feet high, is to be washed. This looks like a case at last where the use of paper towels would be justified.

The garment makers have been ordered to raise salaries. The Government holds that the old slogan "Walk up two flights and get an extra pair of pants" has no place in modern business.

The New Hampshire Legislature is considering taking the hard part out of ski jumping by providing an aerial tramway to carry jumpers back up the mountain after the jump. This is the first time any State has carried the Forgotten Man Movement that far.

The Last Straw.

I do not subscribe to the ban or taboo,
Or fight to the last with those grim bitter-enders
But this is one thing that I never could do—

Aged Man Is Lost In Virginia Hills

Eagle Rock, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—M. F. Burgess, 77, has been lost in the hills near here since 10 a. m. Saturday. Every available citizen of Eagle Rock turned out Saturday night to help scour the countryside with flashlights and lanterns. The fruitless search has continued.

Lieut. Ross, of Camp Malone, in Douthat State Park, joined the searchers with a squad of volunteers from CCC Company, No. 1,386. Bloodhounds brought here from Staunton were unable to pick up the trail because of the heavy rain which fell Saturday.

Mr. Burgess was last seen Saturday morning as he started alone toward Rat Hole Mountain.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

"The Quest of the Davis Cup."

This is the title of a book of over 300 pages, fully illustrated, written by the accomplished editor of the magazine, American Lawn Tennis, Stephen Wallis Merrihew. It gives a fully detailed history of every Davis Cup match from the first in 1900 to, and including, the loss of the cup by the United States to France in 1927.

In 1899 four young American tennis players went on a journey of many thousands of miles to play with various foreign and domestic experts. They were Dwight F. Davis, his doubles partner, Holcolm Ward, Malcolm Whitman and Beals Wright. "The most important outcome of his journey was the decision, reached subsequently by Davis, to offer a lawn tennis trophy for international competition."

Mr. Davis could not have foreseen the enormous international interest this struggle for the cup would arouse. I can not think of any parallel to it in any other form of international competition. There is more intense and widespread excitement about this yearly contest than about any other athletic event, where various nations come into the field. One would have to go back to the fifth century before Christ when the city states of Greece met in competition at the Olympic games, to find a parallel. The winners are now national heroes.

The first match in 1900 was won by U. S., Mr. Davis winning one single, and with his partner the double, while his other single was stopped by rain. Since then, U. S. has won 10 times, more than any other nation; British Isles, 7; France and Australia, 6 apiece, and no other nation once.

1900—United States.
1901—No games.
1902—United States.
1903-1906—British Isles.
1907-1909—Australasia.
1910—No games.
1911—Australasia.
1913—United States.
1914—Australasia.
1915-1918—No games.
1919—Australasia.
1920-1926—United States.
1927-1932—France.
1933-1934—British Isles.

As Mr. Tilden has said, it takes two first-class players to win the cup; one is not enough. So long as U. S. had both Tilden and Johnston, she won the cup seven successive years. So long as France had Lacoste and Borotra, or Cochet and Borotra, she won the cup six successive years. Now British Isles has Perry and Austin, and they have won two years in succession.

The most exciting singles set in the history of the cup was in 1914, when McLoughlin beat Brookes, the Australian, 17—15. That is also the longest; although this year Perry beat Shields in the set that won the cup, 15—13, and the tension of both players and spectators was terrific. The greatest comeback, after losing two singles matches, was by U. S. this year, against Australasia.

I wish all matches could end with as good feeling as the 1913 round which I saw in New York between U. S. and Australasia, where Stanley Doust, just after being beaten in the deciding match, called on the spectators to give three cheers for the United States!

Veteran Virginia Officeholders to Quit Posts Sept. 1

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Three veteran officeholders of Roanoke, Salem and Vinton will retire from public service Saturday.

All of them are mayors—S. P. Seifert, of Roanoke; John E. Shank, of Salem, and H. H. Dowdy, of Vinton. Their officeholding records combined cover a period of 53 years.

Mayor Seifert first became a councilman of Roanoke City in 1897. Later when the dual form of government was adopted he was elected to the Board of Aldermen, and still later, after establishment of the city manager, or commission form of government, was elected to the new council. He has been mayor several different terms, his last dating from 1930. Mayor Shank, of Salem, has served either as councilman, school board member, or mayor for 16 years, and Mayor Dowdy has a service record of seven years, four of which were as mayor of the town. Sydney F. Small, who recently led the ticket in municipal elections here, is regarded as a likely choice for the mayoralty of Roanoke.

The Fable of a Girl Who Changed Her Mind

By Robert Quillen

Sallie was the kind of girl that story tellers call old fashioned. She was good; her mind was clean; and she was dainty and fastidious and sweet and shy and alluring and altogether charming.

But she wasn't satisfied, and one day she called on the village magician and said:

"I wish to be like a man."

"Very well," said the magician, "I'll make you strong, dignified, noble, unselfish, brave and——."

"Not that kind of man," Sallie interrupted.

"I wish to be—well, modern. Smoke and drink and that sort of thing. Tell dirty stories and wear and act tough and coarse. Sophisticated, if you know what I mean."

"Oh, sure," said the magician. "Just have a seat till I finish this thing."

Sallie sat down and watched the magician's deft hands manipulate the leaves of a curious plant.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Well," said the magician, "it was a rose—a dainty and fragrant and beautiful thing—but I am trying, as you see, to make an apple of it. Taste it."

Sallie nibbled and made a wry face. "I don't mean to be rude," said she, "but it tastes rotten."

"Of course," said the magician. "It's going to be a rotten apple. I think it would prefer that."

"Nonsense," said Sallie. "If it couldn't be a good apple, it would rather be a rose, I'm sure."

"Well, it's still a rose," said the magician. "I'm just making it resemble a rotten apple."

"But you have spoiled all of the rose part," cried Sallie. "The fragrance is gone and the coloring and the beauty, and nothing remains but the thorns."

"That's true," the magician agreed. "In remodeling, the first job is to tear out the original equipment. And now I have finished it and a very good job, too, if I must say so, as I shouldn't. So that's that, and what can I do for you?"

"You may call me a taxi," said Sallie. "I'm going shopping for a new dress that's lacy and frilly and feminine. And I hope those thorns scratch you."

Col. Williamson Enters 100th Year

Danville, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Col. E. M. Williamson, one of Danville's oldest men, will celebrate his ninety-ninth birthday tomorrow.

He is one of the few living men today who conversed with Gen. Lee just before the surrender at Appomattox. He recalls clearly seeing Gen. Lee astride his horse near Farmville and how the Southern leader stopped him and told him to make his way to the rear to have a slight wound treated.

Col. Williamson, senior member of a tobacco firm which bears his name, goes to his office every day, taking an active part in the conduct of his leaf business. He spends afternoons at home with his grandchildren.

Japan Avers Reds Causing Rail Strife

Foreign Office Voices Opinion Revolt Is Ultimate Object.

Tokyo, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Charges that the Third Internationale—world-wide organization of militant Communists whose aim is to foment the "world revolution"—was behind allegedly subservient activities in Manchukuo were voiced by the foreign office spokesman today.

The spokesman declared that "present evidence" showed that this body, with headquarters in Moscow, was back of the numerous bandit raids and other incidents on the Chinese Eastern Railway, center of controversy in North Manchuria.

Soviet citizens have been involved as agents for the Third Internationale, the spokesman charged, and were being rounded up as rapidly as evidence could be obtained against them.

Commenting on the arrests of Soviet employes on the C. E. R., he declared they would be prosecuted for two classes of crimes:

1. Actual damage to the C. E. R. properties, in collusion with native bandits.

2. Allegedly "subservient activities," which he blamed on the Communist party organization and the Third Internationale.

The exact number of Soviet citizens now held was uncertain, the spokesman replied to queries, but other sources chiefly from Manchukuo indicated at least 115 had been arrested during the present campaign. Of these 70 have been arrested since Moscow formally demanded the release of those first seized by the Manchukuo authorities, defying the Russian note.

The Japanese foreign office is still studying the nature of its official reply to the Moscow note of protest, the spokesman added.

The Soviet authorities, he said, appeared divided on plans for a joint Soviet-Manchukuo agreement regulating affairs along the Amur River, border line between Manchukuo and Siberia for many miles. He said some Russian officials apparently are definitely unfriendly, while others favor resuming negotiations on various outstanding subjects, including sale by Moscow of Russia's half interest in the C. E. R. to Manchukuo.

Soviet Charges Japs Arresting Rail Men

Moscow, Aug. 27 (AP).—Soviet newspapers published charges today that Japanese gendarmes are arresting Russian citizens in the State of Manchukuo, where disorders in operation of the Russian-owned Chinese Eastern Railway continue.

Heretofore arrests of Russian employes of the railway have been made by Manchurian and white guard policemen. Reports that Japanese officials have taken a direct hand in the turbulent affairs of the railroad caused concern here.

Russian dispatches from Khabarovsk, Siberia, stated that relatives of the Soviet citizens arrested are greatly worried because of alleged brutal treatment of the prisoners. It was charged they were beaten and forced to sign statements that they acted under instructions from the Soviet Far-Eastern Red army in the promotion of wrecks, disorders and banditry along the railroad line.

Bausells' Funeral Plea Is Rejected

Bristol, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Henry F. Bausell, Lebanon, Va., publisher, who is under sentence of 20 years in Virginia State Prison following his conviction on a charge of slaying T. Eugene Cornett at Rural Retreat, Va., January 13, was not permitted to attend funeral services at Lebanon yesterday for his father, Capt. James Wesley Bausell, who died Thursday morning.

Judge Horace Sutherland, of Wythe County Circuit Court, Saturday denied Bausell and his son Bernice, who faces a 22-year prison term for the Cornett slaying, a furlough from jail to attend the funeral. The Bausells are in Bristol, Va., jail pending a supreme court hearing of their convictions.

Services for Capt. Bausell, a Civil War veteran who held many offices of trust during his lifetime and was for 16 years mayor of Lebanon, were held at 2:30 p. m. yesterday.

Three Teas Show Social Season Near

Miss Betsy Dern Hostess; Casardis Entertain at Farewell.

Mexican Poloists Guests of Embassy Military Attache's Party.

Summer, which has gracefully, but too speedily flitted across the stage, is about to make final exit.

A bit of tell-tale yellow and orange here and there on foliage and shrubbery, and a new tang in the air these last few days fall in step with a general pick-up in social doings as forerunners of autumn.

During the summer months, those who remain in town, and there are many, find plenty to occupy their evenings, but when day-time social affairs begin creeping up on the calendar it is an infallible sign of crisp, chilly days around the corner.

Yesterday afternoon Washington society found itself delighted with three equally interesting teas.

Early in the afternoon Miss Betsy Dern, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, entertained informally from 4 until 6 o'clock at her home, "Highwood," in honor of her house guest, Miss Mary Burnett, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Thomas W. Burnett, of Fort Douglas, Utah.

Casardis Entertain.

Although the drawing rooms were charmingly decorated with roses of every hue fresh from Highwood's own garden, Miss Dern and her young guests chose to adjourn to the terrace for their refreshments and chatting. Miss Dern was wearing a frock of a smart black and yellow print and her honor guest was attired in eggshell eyelet.

Later in the afternoon the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel was the scene of the farewell party of the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora Casardi. The room, with its background of pale greenish-blue walls and crystal-clear mirrors, was effectively decorated with varicolored gladioli and tall red and white lighted tapers. In the center of the buffet table was a huge cake decorated with a reproduction of the Italian naval emblem in red, white and green. Elsewhere on the table there were baskets of spun sugar, timmed with the colors of Italy and of the United States.

The guests, of whom there were about 200, included members of the diplomatic and official circles, United States naval officers and their families and the many friends the Casardis have made during their stay in Washington.

Sails on Saturday.

Signora Casardi will sail from New York on Saturday for Italy, where she will be joined later in the season by Capt. Casardi, who will be given his new station upon his arrival in Rome.

From 5 until 7 o'clock the apartment of the Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Azcarate in the Westchester was the scene of much gayety, when they entertained at a reception in honor of Gen. Gilberto R. Limon, president of the Mexican Polo Federation, and Senora de Limon, who accompanied her husband to Washington; Capt. Alfonso Corona, secretary of the federation, and the officers of the Mexican polo team, Capt. Antonio Perez, Capt. Antonio Nava, Capt. Juan Gracia, Capt. Quintin Reyes, Capt. Nicanor Chavez and Capt. Miguel Zabaloytia.

The drawing rooms were decorated with pink gladioli and ferns. Senora de Azcarate, who received with Senora de Limon, was becomingly gowned in deep wine colored crepe.

Among the Guests.

Among those who were invited to meet the polo enthusiasts from Mexico were the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, the Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Fernando Gonzales Roa, and his nieces, Senorita Dolores Chico Alatorre and Senorita Amalia Chico Alatorre; the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Manuel Marquez Sterling; the Chief of Staff of the United States Army, Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur; the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Harry Woodring; the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Senor Don Roberto Despradel; the Minister of Ecuador, Senor Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Military Attache of the German Embassy, Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Hugh A. Drum, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Alfred T. Smith, Maj. Gen. George Simonds, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. L. H. Bash, Maj. Gen. Benjamin Foulois, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Leon B. Kromer, the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, the Military Attache of the Embassy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Vladimir A. Burzin, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Perry L. Miles, Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, vice president of the polo committee; Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, Col. and Mrs. Kenyon Joyce, Col. and Mrs. E. H. Humphreys, the Military Attache of the British Embassy, Col. Maurice F. Day and Mrs. Day; the Military Attache of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. K. Culbertson on Bridge

A GAMBIT.

A man with $100 in the bank and with a premonition that the bank is about to fail is strongly tempted to draw his money out immediately. If enough people have the same premonition and act accordingly, the bank is quite likely to do what is expected of it. In Bridge, a player defending against a trump contract and holding the Ace of a side suit in which Dummy has a singleton, is tempted to play it on the first round, and though this is the correct play in a great majority of cases, there are some situations in which, like a run on the bank, it results in bringing about exactly what is feared.

On today's hand the East player found the only method of defeating the opponents' contract in deliberately sacrificing a trick by not going up with an Ace. The sacrificing of this trick eventually enabled the defensive team to win two other tricks which they would not have won had East grabbed the first one. This deliberate immediate sacrifice, with future profit in view, is equivalent to a gambit in Chess.

1♠	2♡	2♠	3♣
3♠(1)	Pass	4♠(2)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Slightly optimistic. However, North has given a free Raise and South accordingly decides to show his slight additional strength.

2—Another slight overbid. North has previously given a free Raise and just barely has it. Conservative tactics would suggest the expediency of a pass.

Having no way of knowing his opponents' exact holding, West decided to make as innocuous an Opening as possible and chose the nine of clubs, the highest of his partner's suit. The singleton, of course, was played from Dummy, and East fought down the natural impulse to play his Ace until he had stopped to analyze the situation. From the bidding he knew that the Declarer could not have more than two hearts and accordingly the only hope of defeating the contract lay in taking two tricks in the diamond suit. He realized from his partner's Opening lead that South must hold the King and Queen of clubs guarded at least once. Accordingly, if the club Ace were played to the first trick, two clubs would be set up in the South hand and these cards would provide discards for Dummy's two low diamonds. With this occuring there would be no way of defeating the contract. East therefore decided not to go up with the Ace of clubs, but to let his partner's nine ride. He realized that if he did this he would never be able to win a club trick. However, he further knew that South would never be able to set up his other club honor and as a result if West held the diamond Queen, the East and West partnership would probably take two diamond tricks.

Obviously, everything turned out exactly as East had figured. South was unable to avoid the loss of two diamond tricks and two heart tricks, and East's correctly conceived hold-up brought about the defeat of the contract. It is equally obvious that had East gone up with the club Ace, no subsequent line of defense could have stopped the eventual diamond discards and cross-ruff, and the contract would have been fulfilled.

Bouncing Baby Rings Up Cash Sale of $1.19

Mother on Shopping Tour Glad to Buy Bouncer That Hushes Him.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BABIES are very poor shoppers most mothers will agree, but very good ones say the stores. A case proving there are two sides to the question occurred yesterday in a downtown shop. A mother brave enough to bring her youngster on a shopping tour was standing by a counter in the children's department holding a chubby baby boy in her arms.

"He's such a good child!" one of the clerks remarked. The mother proudly pinched his cheek and twisted his top-knot curl on her finger. All seemed well. Suddenly, for no apparent reason, baby squalled lustily. Minutes passed but the squalling continued.

Looking around in desperation, the mother spied a baby bouncer, a canvas seat attached to a metal frame and supported by four springs. She set him astride the seat. Junior kicked and yelled louder than ever. His kicking, however, started the bouncer and up and down went baby. His yells subsided gradually to delighted coos and glubs.

Mother finished her shopping and went to gather her precious bundle, still bouncing in great glee. But the precious bundle remonstrated and clung with might and main to the sides of his new-found throne. When persuasion failed, mother and clerks lifted him forcibly from his seat. The yells started louder and lustier than ever. There was nothing to do but put junior back in the bouncer.

"How much is it?" the harassed parent inquired.

"One dollar nineteen," she was told.

Without a moment's hesitation, "I'll take it," she said.

Mother called junior's father to the store by telephone and together they marched out, carrying junior gurgling in the bouncer.

Adjustable Brassieres.

Lingerie merchandise is slow coming in this year. A few models have arrived, but few are extraordinary.

One downtown store, however, has some new brassieres with a tricky adjustable waist strap that fastens on the side. This is designed to be let out, or taken in, according to weight gained or lost. There's always the possibility of slight shrinkage, too, in which case the strap may be released to the proper length.

The brassieres come in only one color, tearose, but in either net, lace, or broadcloth. The latter is a favorite with girls asembling college wardrobes. They will also appreciate the convenience of adjustment, since few coeds escape an appreciable gain in weight in a term at school.

Solid Eau de Cologne.

A solidified eau de cologne is one of the newest conveniences. It is made from an eau de cologne which has always been one of the most popular. The new product is a kind of cream stick which may be carried in the pocketbook, tucked away in the suitcase, or kept in the pocket of the car. Automobilist who know the strain of driving long miles will appreciate what a convenience such a refreshener might prove. Rubbed across the forehead, it banishes weariness. It is also invaluable to keep close at hand in stuffy rooms.

A Man's Own Toothbrush.

Here's a "he-man" toothbrush at last! It has been brought out by a firm long in toothbrush business, and "in the know" regarding toothbrush problems. They say the poor masculine side of the family has too long submitted to the indignities of pink and blue brushes, with downy bristles. So now they give him a brush "what is a brush." It has four rows of sturdy, natural bristles which conform perfectly to the formation of the teeth. Unbleached, the bristles retain all their original resilience and oils. The result is better massaging of gums and polishing of teeth.

Jobs for Crochet Needles.

Crochet-ers have a busy season ahead if they tackle all the tasks suggested by a local shop. Here, neatly wrapped in cellophane, are dozens of interesting patterns, the threads, all ready to begin on.

Each package has directions, and the equipment for making anything from a pan holder to a luncheon set. There are pillow and carriage covers, knitting bags, dress hangers, napkin rings—all ready to be crocheted.

Shadings for Fingernails.

It's no small wonder that fingernails are as variably tinted as the aurora borealis. One may purchase a polish set with crimson, rose, deep and natural shades, and a polish remover, all for 35 cents. The remover comes in a large bottle so that it will last the life of the four polishes.

A set of this kind kept handy on the dressing room table enables you to change your fingernail tint to suit your temperament.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Variety in Fall's New Wools Appears Greater Than Ever

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Ask the Black Sheep if he has any wool this fall and he'll have to answer much more than the traditional "three bags full." The list of different kinds of fall woolens is longer than ever—enough to fill a dozen bgas.

All the wools used for tailored street dresses are used for sports dresses, too, plus some others.

There are the plain, lightweight almost-sheer wool crepes; light textures with patterned surfaces such as the pebbles and flecks you also find in silks; open-work weaves with raised ribs; crepe weaves with mohair or rabbit hair woven in to make them very soft and warm; and others with tinsel worked in in checks or stripes.

A Frosted Look.

In addition, sports dresses are also made of wools with kemp or rayon woven in to give a frosted look and of lightweight weaves resembling tweeds in two-tone mixtures, stripes and plaids.

Looking over the dressy coat woolens you find some of the same types that were in fashion last fall but with certain changes in their weave.

Both the rough boucles and the smooth suedes are again in fashion. But the boucles are not so coarse and rough as they were and the suedes are not necessarily plain.

The boucles are finer and they are often striped (or ribbed, if you prefer). The suedes are cut to give diagonal or vertical striped effects.

"Bark" Weaves.

New woolens for the dressy coat are the so-called "bark" fabrics, meaning weaves which have an unevenly patterned surface somewhat resembling the bark of a tree. Some are in crisp, worsted weaves and others in softer, more suede-like finish.

Tweed, of course, is the big woolen for sports coats. And tweeds are more colorful this fall. Patterns are bolder and colors more striking.

Crisp Harris types are still liked but there are more of the softer Shetland varieties than formerly.

Bark tweed is new, woven with wavy ridges and with kemp worked in to give it a slightly hairy look. Mixtures are everywhere in multi-color tnd two-color effect.

As in the sports dresses there is a frosted surface wool. Hairy wools, too, with rabbit or angora mixed in. And fleeces, llamas and camel's hairs are used for some very comfortable, warm coats, usually of the polo variety.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better dress shops and department stores.

Child Chats

WANTED—An inventor who will devise these accessories for the 2-year-old:

A bib that will catch food lost in transit.

Crib sheets that will fasten down so securely that the most persistent child can't rip them off. (No safety pins, please, or he might open and swallow them.)

A humane muzzle that will prevent him putting nails, match sticks, cigarette butts and June bugs in his mouth.

A magic way of teaching him that scissors cut, fire burns, cats scratch and glass breaks.

Frappe Treatment Puts Zest Into Fresh Fruit Cocktails

By Ann Barrett.

IT MAY not be a novelty any more to start lunch or dinner with a glass of tomato juice seasoned just so, and well chilled. Some of the other juices are less familiar in that setting—pineapple, grapefruit, grape, apple, prune, clam, and claim and tomato—all are excellent provided you know what to do with them.

Sometimes just serving these juices straight is best. Again certain flavorings or seasonings may be added to advantage, or maybe mixing them with one another, or perhaps freezing them to a delicious frosty-looking frappe (to be eaten with a spoon). Or maybe mixing them with fruits.

Making this kind of cocktail is almost as much of a cult as mixing the spirituous kind.

The main rules in both cases are the same: Don't mix till the last moment; sweeten very light, if at all, and serve cold.

Juice Combinations.

The easiest way to have tomato juice cocktails is to buy them ready-squeezed and seasoned, but if you want to buy just the plain juice and season it yourself, lemon, onion, celery and worcestershire are the items to have handy. Beware of salt, because most tomato juice is already salted. For the average taste it seems about right to add 1 tablespoon lemon juice to a cup tomato juice, along with ¼ teaspoon worcestershire, a dash of onion juice from a freshly-scraped onion, and a dash of celery juice come by the same way.

It's considerable more trouble to press your own tomato juice, but there are squeezers designed for just this purpose, and now that tomatoes are plentiful you might like to play around with them. Tomato juice seasoned as above, then mixed half and half with clam juice, makes a cocktail much favored by men especially. Some like a bit of horseradish added to it.

A newer trick with clam and tomato juice that has grown increasingly popular this year is to freeze the juice to a mush, or frappe in automatic refrigerator trays, spoon it into cocktail glasses or footed sherbets, serve a wedge of lemon with it and eat it with a spoon. Sometimes pineapple juice is frozen this way, just firm enough to scoop out in a small mound. Make a little hole in the center of this and fill it with a teaspoon or two of rum.

Fruit Cocktails.

Fruit cocktails have taken on more form and color this year. (More than ever they are not just a medley of any old kind of fruit.) Three of the most popular, attractive and delicious that I've seen about at parties are the melon ball cocktail, the minted pineapple cocktail and the mint ice pear cocktail.

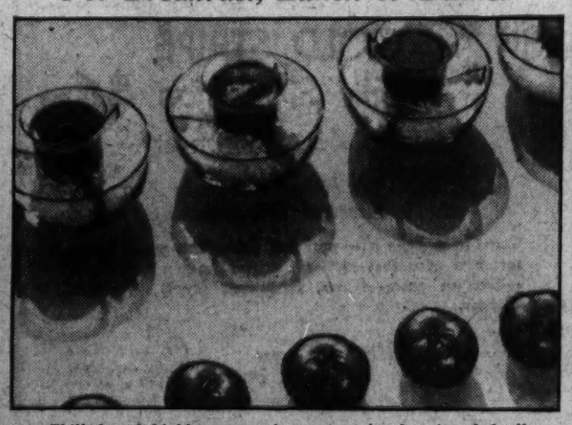
Cantaloupe, honey dew melon or watermelon—scooped out into balls with a French cutter—makes the melon cocktail. All three may be used, or just one. Thin raspberry syrup—not too sweet and slightly touched up with lemon—is the thing of all things to serve over these little balls. Not too much of this juice. Just enough to make the lemon look moist and leave a few teaspoons in the bottom of the glass for color. A cantaloupe cocktail sauced in this way is cantaloupe supreme.

But there's a sparkling (carbonated) apple juice on the market now that's also delicious over these little balls—or on any fruit, for that matter. It's a good imitation champagne, though not called that.

Minted Pineapple.

With fresh pineapple still on the market, the minted pineapple cocktail still flourishes. Cut the pineapple in wedge-shaped pieces and pour over it a minted syrup made like this: Bring ½ cup water and ½ cup sugar to a boil and boil 3 minutes. Then cool and add 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Add just enough green coloring (only a drop or two) to tint this a pale, cool green. Also add a drop or two of mint flavoring (spearmint extract). Top the cocktail with a sprig of fresh mint.

For Breakfast, Lunch or Dinner



Chilled and highly seasoned tomato juice has invaded all the best households of the country.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If August 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

On this date you may have some decidedly good breaks in business. You may find it profitable time spent if you listen to a salesman who may call. You may discover it is possible to accomplish more through sociability on this date than by using the customary cut and dried methods usually prescribed by business practice. A condition may arise which might tempt you to deviate from the truth, but if you wish to use good judgment, stick to it, for there is every possibility a falsehood might be uncovered.

A friend may call, or meet you, who has the power to do you a great deal of good by saying the right thing at the proper time in a matter that may have important bearing on your business career.

Married and engaged couples might possibly find this a good day for discussing future plans and house hunting. If in love it may be well not to take for granted that the object of your affection is a mind reader and clearly understands your sentiments. A few well expressed words regarding your feelings might prove helpful.

If a woman and August 28 is your natal day, expectations you now have may very shortly be realized. Being very diplomatic and having the ability to both see and hear things the average person would miss, any position which would require a very observant person might prove an ideal one for you. Checking up or inventory work of any kind, as well as bookkeeping, offer excellent opportunities. You should make a man a fascinating wife and prove an ideal mother.

The child born on August 28, after it passes through school, should be sent to college, if circumstances permit. This child may do much better if trained for a professional career. However, it would probably prove a mistake not to allow it to choose the profession that appeals to it most.

If a man and August 28 is your natal day, you have a good brain for planning. You not only can visualize with remarkable clarity, but can successfully devise ways and means to accomplish a desired end. Any type of work requiring detailed investigation or the compilation of accurate data should prove a wonderful field of activity for one of your ability. Your sense of loyalty and the practice of it, may gain you many friends and admirers. You should find a great deal of happiness through matrimony.

Stain Remover Method Told

The Post Invites Your Household Hints to Help Others.

EVERY housekeeper has at least one or two household hints that will lighten her duties tucked away in her mind. Every Tuesday and Sunday a group of such hints appear on this page. Any suggestions you have to offer kindly address to Miss Susan Mills, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

Two helpful suggestions have been sent in by Mrs. Mary V. Duvall, of Edmonston, Md. They are:

To remove stains from white clothes soak them in Javelle water, made as follows: Put a pound of bicarbonate of soda into a kettle over the fire, add one quart of boiling water, let it remain ten minutes, then add a quarter of a pound of chloride of lime. Stir it until there are no lumps, and use when cool. This water will remove almost any stain. Coffee or tea on white table linen can be removed without injury if laid in the water for a few minutes and carefully rinsed afterward in warm water.

To remove grease spots: Saturate the spot with benzine, place a blotting-paper on both sides of the spot, apply a hot iron to the upper surface, and keep it there some time.

Turtle, Jennie, Makes Her 28th Crossing

Pittsfield, Mass., (U.P.)—"Jennie" has made her twenty-eighth annual crossing, it was revealed by Howard Porter of Mount Washington.

Jennie, a mud turtle, crossed porter's lawn and has passed over it each year on its way to the summer home in a swamp. The initials "M. P." and the date 1906, carved by Porter's brother, Malcolm, were still on the turtle's back.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Septic Endocarditis.

We are often puzzled to explain just why one person contracts pneumonia, scarlet fever or some other disease, whereas another person in the same environment escapes the infection. We know that some individuals possess a natural immunity to disease.

Through the discoveries of medical science a way has been found of conferring immunity to certain diseases upon those who would otherwise be susceptible. Vaccination protects against smallpox, toxin antitoxin protects against diphtheria, and immunity to typhoid may be secured by the use of vaccine.

Unfortunately, there is a fairly large group of diseases in which neither the disease itself, vaccination nor a serum can or does provide immunity. There are numerous strains of the streptococcus group, and so far most of them have defied the march of medical science.

Until medical science, through its research workers, can learn more about the habits of the organisms responsible for endocarditis the remedy lies in prevention.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

Deborah's grandfather tied up her fortune so that she could not make the mistake her mother did and elope with a stranger. By the will she must marry the son of Courtney Graham, whom her mother jilted. But the youth is not the man his father was; he wants only Deborah's money. To prevent the marriage, and disaster to Deborah, a wealthy young man named Bryn marries her; the two of them agree to let her grandmother believe that Bryn is actually Stuart Graham. The young couple, married on the Coast, go to live on grandmother's lonely mountain ranch. Bryn solves a ticklish situation by sending for servants.

DEBORAH sprang up. "Oh, what's the use of all this?" she cried. "I won't have you laughing at her. It's no use making fun. She thinks . . . she thinks we can manage anything now. She doesn't know. What am I going to do?"

"It's all we can do to pay the taxes," Gary said at last.

There was a silence.

"Well," Bryn remarked, "how about selling a piece of land? Down around the curve of the hill, lower down on the brook. The country is a sportsman's paradise. I'm sure we could find some wealthy man in the city who'd give a good deal for a quarter of an acre, cleared, ready to build on."

Deborah turned. "You don't have to worry about this," she said tempestuously. "I forgot about you. I didn't mean to make you come into it. You've already done what you can."

"And," Bryn went on calmly, to Gary, "perhaps we could get him to promise not to build for a year."

Gary lifted the list from the table. He studied it. "What she wants here, as cheap as we could do it, would take a thousand dollars," he said. "A thousand dollars. Servants, and repairs, and all that. I've figgered it out many a time, what it would take. We couldn't get even that much money for a piece of land, even if we could get her to sign the deed without knowing. And we'd still be in the same box. This is only a beginning."

"We might get several thousands if we went about it right."

"I've thought of it," Gary replied dully. "I've priced land around. We couldn't get several thousands short of selling the whole place, and that we can't do."

Deborah came back to the table. "I'll have to pretend I'm ill," she said. "I'll have to say I've a pain in my heart, or something like that. Something that can't stand excitement. That's the only thing."

Let's Tell the Truth.

But it was Bryn who objected. "You might as well tell her the truth," he said, "because specialists come high. We wouldn't be any better off."

"Let's tell her the truth," Gary said sharply.

Deborah thought it over.

"Tell her that we haven't had any money for three years?"

"Yes."

"Tell her that there won't be any for another year?"

"Yes."

"If," Deborah said slowly, "if she'd sign the paper now, that she's supposed to sign a year from now, when she's satisfied that I'm . . . happy, if she'd sign that today, couldn't we get the money today?"

Bryn shook his head. "The will specifically states that the money can not be touched for one year from the date of your marriage, except in the case of your grandmother's death. Nothing she can do can change that."

Her hands fell to her sides, and she turned away again. Bryn rose. "However," he said, "the way out has just occurred to me. Mr. Holworthy."

"What could he do?"

"He knows the circumstances. He could advance us the money we need."

"But will he?"

"We can try. In the meantime, we can buy the smaller things. . . . I have a little money of my own, a few hundreds."

"We can't take your money."

"Nonsense. You can give me a note, if you like, and pay me interest. I can't possibly use it myself up here, can I? So it's settled."

Gary drew a deep breath of relief. "I'd thought of borrowing before," he said. "But until Miss Deborah was married, we didn't have any prospects of paying it back. Now it's all right. If you don't mind lending what you have, sir."

"I don't like borrowing," Deborah continued to protest, her cheeks flaming. "We're taking enough from you."

Gary turned toward her. "Miss Deborah, you don't understand," he protested. "This is still part of the business arrangement you talked about this morning."

"I can't see that. We're being offered something I can't adequately repay. We can't take it."

"But it's like this," Gary said patiently. "If we don't go through with it, if you tell your grandmother now, then this gentleman won't get his money at the end of the year. You know what your grandmother will do. You know how terrified she is of fortune hunters. She wouldn't recognize this marriage. It's too late to marry anybody else; your birthday is past."

Deborah listened, her eyes dark and smouldering. "So it's just as a safeguard for yourself that you're offering your money?" she asked icily.

"Something of the sort," Bryn said with truth.

"Very well, then," she assented, and look as if she were about to say more. Instead, she pushed open the door, and ran like a wild thing down the path to the sanctuary of the shadows beside the brook.

"And this," Grandmother said, moving aside as Bryn followed her through the door, "this is the drawing room."

They stood in a grey-green twilight. On the outer walls the blinds were drawn close over the windows; no ray of sun crept in to relieve the gloom. Shapeless and grotesque masses of furniture stood about, covered with once-white dust sheets that were now grown yellowed with age.

"It was a beautiful room," she said softly. "When Deborah was small we always used this room. Grandfather and I dressed for dinner, of course. He was meticulously correct. We came down and waited for Deborah, and when she was dressed, in her little ruffled silk dresses, she made her entrance."

She looked up at him. "I am very glad you have come, my boy. I think we were beginning to fade into the landscape ourselves, just as the house and grounds are. To be covered over with time. Life must be a ceaseless dispute with oblivion, is that not true? I had forgotten. For myself, it does not matter, but for Deborah . . ."

Bryn Writes a Letter.

When Bryn had taken her upstairs to the door of her room, he went across the big upper central hall to his own room. He sat down at the small writing table before the window and began a letter to Tubby:

Sweet Tub;

All goeth well. The portcullis lieth gently across the moat, the archers are at their posts. The warders pace steadfastly up and down before our doors, crying out from time to time that it is 10 of the clock, or 1 of the clock, or whatever it happeneth to be of the clock. (P. S.—If you withh, you may thay "it ith 10 of the clock." You underthtand. Anything to make life eathier.) And so to business.

As I was saying. There are a number of things I wish you to do for me, and at once. Immediately. Kindly go down to old Fuey Lung How, give him my kindest respects, inquire after the health of his son, his son's son, and any further male additions to the family of whom I may not have been informed, keeping carefully clear, if possible, of the subject of female additions. He is rather stout, and it would not do to enrage him. As I was saying; when you get him in the proper frame of mind, work the subject carefully and with great delicacy around to the matter of tea. Come at it by way of gunpowder, the Japanese Sinus trouble, or anything minor and not too exciting. Because I very urgently desire some of the Jasmine tea with which he presented me at Christmas. A great problem lies before you. You can not buy that tea, as you perfectly well know. It can not be bought. And I must have some. Whatever you do, don't ask for it outright, and you mustn't hint. Hinting is very bad form.

I leave it to you. If you think of any way in which you might suggest that 10 pounds would be a suitable amount, do not hesitate. Introduce the 10-pound idea in a psychological manner. Such as, for instance, asking him whether or not his last grandson did not weigh 10 pounds at the time when he made his first bow upon this mortal plane. Delicacy, Tubby, is all that is required.

And now there are one or two other matters. Kindly go down to the employment agency and procure for me at once one first-class cook, preferably the turbot-in-wine and trouffles-in-artichoke sort, rather than the boiled-potatoes-in-hominy type. Delicacy again, you understand. It might be as well to go over carefully all the cooks of your acquaintance, meaning, of course, those in the houses of your friends, and, having chosen the best, wait for her at the back door on a number of evenings, bearing tastefully chosen gifts, such, for instance, as an armful of lilies of the valley or a small pearl necklace.

A cook. Yes, and three housemaids as well. I make no suggestion here. Three housemaids of the best, Tubby, and you may win them in any way you see fit. And, as an after-thought, I think we may as well have a butler, too. You might consult with Burch on this matter. Perhaps he has a friend.

Thank you, my friend. I appreciate your cooperation more than I can say.

With gratitude and affection,
BRYN.

P. S.—If your courage fail you, or your moral sense prove too strong to allow you to trample it down on my behalf, I would suggest that you go to the home of your sister and have a short talk with her on the servant problem. Perhaps Sally's cook has a friend, too. If so, nothing could be sweeter.

Deborah Is Angry.

With the letter sealed in his pocket, Bryn went down the stairs in search of Deborah. From the front of the house he heard the sound of the piano. He went slowly toward the drawing room, listening. The piano was being banged with fury. Either Deborah or Grandmother was playing the "Norwegian Bridal Procession" in such a way that it sounded like the march on Paris.

He opened the door and went in. Deborah, her back to him, was pouncing angrily on handfuls of keys and making them wince in pain. She was ruining the time. Bryn stood for a moment watching her. He was restraining an impulse to walk forward, slip his arms underneath her, lift her from the stool and hold her firmly against him while she kicked and stormed and raged at him, while he looked down into her dark eyes, smiling, waiting for her anger to subside. There would be a moment then when she would lie, limp and beaten, in his arms; and then, with her face at his shoulder and her hair shaken loose over his arm, he could . . .

He put his hands definitely into his pockets and went across behind her to the piano. He leaned on it and looked across at her. For half a second she did not see him, and went on, lips tight, eyes flashing, pounding at the keys. Then she caught a movement, looked up, and saw him.

Her hands dropped to her lap, and she stared at him, mute and angry.

"Sorry to interrupt," Bryn said; "the music was beautiful. Such expression. But I'm going in to town, and I wondered if you'd care to go."

"No."

"It's a long drive alone," Bryn said plaintively.

"I'm sorry. You may add something extra to your bill for the trip," she said coldly, and turned and went from the room without a backward glance.

Bryn followed her. That girl, he found himself saying, was going to get herself into difficulties one of these days. What she was asking for was a good sound shaking.

He went upstairs again and knocked on Grandmother's door. She opened it promptly.

"I have to go to town in the car," Bryn told her. "Would you care to put on your bonnet and come? We could be back by dinner time."

"Why . . . I don't know." Her hands fluttered helplessly. "I haven't been away from here for many years. Not since . . . not since we sold the horses. Take Deborah. She . . . it would be easier for Deborah."

"She's tired of motoring. You'd enjoy it, Grandmother. You needn't get out of the car."

She lifted her chin. "Very well," she said. "I will go."

A Trip to Town.

He ran downstairs and out to the car. He started the motor, came to a halt at the door, and Grandmother was there, her breath coming and going with excitement, hat perched at a careful angle, a pair of gloves in her hands. Bryn lifted her gently and put her down in the car. She sank back in the cushions. He shut the door, pressed the starter and the car slid down the drive.

Bryn stopped the car at the gate. He pushed the button of the horn. Instantly Deborah appeared on the little balcony before her room. Bryn opened Grandmother's door, and the old lady leaned out. She waved her handkerchief at the girl.

"I'm going to town, dear," she cried in her thin old voice, and sank back again with a sigh. And Bryn smiled behind his hand at the expression of horrified incredulity that had come over Deborah's face.

Bryn had finished all the important business which had brought him to town. He had been to the bank, had identified himself as the owner of the account transferred from San Francisco a few days ago, and had been bowed out obsequiously by the manager himself. He had posted Tubby's letter as well as a terse one of his own to Holworthy. He had taken Deborah's letter to the lawyer from his pocket and with a smile had opened and read it. Not exactly a business-like document, but clear and to the point. At the bottom a name was signed, and as he read it he received a severe shock.

"Deborah Mayne Brynildson."

Deborah Mayne Brynildson. Deborah was his wife. She had taken his name. She was conscious of her position, far more conscious than he was. Deborah Mayne Brynildson . . . somehow the fact that she bore his name hadn't occured to him. Poor little kid. Perhaps she hated that name.

"Got good news, mister?" the postmaster inquired genially.

Bryn glanced down at the letter in his hand.

"Uh . . . no," he muttered, and tucked the letter with haste into an inside pocket.

Farm Wives Prove Equal To Pioneers

Cheese, Bread and Soap Made at Home as in Early Days.

Drought Hardships Bring Drudgery but Modern Spirit Remains.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE farm woman of today is right back where her grandmother was in providing food and other necessities for her family. Surrounded by automobiles, radios, washing machines and other modern appurtenances of high-geared twentieth century living, she has returned to such homely tasks as the making of cheese, bread and soap.

Many young rural housewives who have never tasted any bread but bakers' bread until a few years ago are now proudly bearing golden loaves from their own ovens. They are spending long hours making their own soap. Their cash is so limited they can not spend a penny for anything they can possibly make themselves.

Some farm women have learned to concoct their own household cleaning supplies and how to repair and even make their own furniture, according to Miss Grace Frysinger, senior home economist of the Department of Agriculture's Extension Service.

But in spite of their difficult circumstances, rural housewives have done little complaining.

Calm in Face of Want.

Even the drought of this summer failed to break their spirit, Miss Frysinger learned. She has just returned from a field trip through Kansas, Arkansas, and other areas parched by a tireless, relentless sun.

"Those women don't know what they're going to do for food this winter," said Miss Frysinger. "Their gardens are as barren as if they'd never been planted. Their fruit is gone. On many farms the wells are dry. The women talk calmly of their desperate situation. There is no hysteria, no bitterness. Their chief worry seems to be the lack of apples for the children's lunch boxes this winter."

Miss Frysinger was not surprised at the stoicism of rural housewives; she was only gratified.

"I learned long ago that farm women have a native, perhaps an intuitive philosophy, born of their closeness to reality," she explained. "And so, instead of wasting time in bewailing the loss of their spring and summer crops, they are hoping for fall gardens. In the meantime they are making over clothes for the third or fourth time.

Needs Filled Without Money.

"They are transforming scraps and odds and ends into slip-covers and pads for their furnitude. They are landscaping their lawns, doing the work themselves, using only supplies that are already on the farm. It's remarkable what those women have accomplished without money."

In addition to devising material makeshifts, rural housewives have done everything they could to keep up the morale of their husbands and children, according to Miss Frysinger. Picnics, home talent shows, church sociables, have been given as rollickingly as though bins and cellars were full of food for the winter; as though there were money in the bank to buy clothing, gasoline and higher education for sons and daughters.

"Many of the farm people come to the picnics and sociables in horse-drawn wagons," said Miss Frysinger. "Their automobiles are standing in their garages. There is no money for gasoline. Those who are able to operate automobiles are thoughtful of their less fortunate neighbors. I found some communities had a slogan: 'Not an empty seat in a carload.'"

New Social Ideal Stays.

But in spite of her forced return to her grandmother's way of living, the farm woman today goes by a new set of standards in her human relationships, declared Miss Frysinger.

"It used to be that the woman who beat all her neighbors in getting her washing on the line Monday morning was considered the best homemaker," she said. "Now the best one is she who has the finest relationship with her family. The rural housewife today is a companion to her husband. She keeps as well posted on public affairs as he does. She makes an attractive home for him. And she makes herself as attractive as possible. Her clothes are in good taste. She keeps herself well groomed. This in spite of the fact that she is doing more toward making the family's living than farm women have ever done."

Many farms would have had their taxes unpaid if courageous women had not opened their homes to tourists, sold food and needlework at roadside stands, Miss Frysinger said.

No Time for Bridge.

"They work from early to late. And yet they manage to find time to attend meetings of the Department of Agriculture's extension groups. At those meetings they learn dress design, interior decorating, landscaping, scientific methods of canning, how to prepare balanced meals," explained the home economist.

"Of course, they don't have a moment left for bridge," she added. "They don't play golf or tennis. And they don't go to cocktail parties. But I've never noticed them pining for any of those things. They have too many other interests."

Labor-saving devices do not appeal to the rural housewife as much as they do to the city dweller, Miss Frysinger has learned. Last year she sent out a questionnaire asking the farm women what they wanted most. She expected them to express desires for things that would make their own work easier. Instead they wanted bigger porches. The family would enjoy a big porch more than a skimpy one. They wanted leaking roofs repaired. The family would be more comfortable under a water-tight roof.

The time has come when farm housewives can not be distinguished from city women because of their appearance, Miss Frysinger declared.

"On my field trip a year ago, I was accompanied to one group meeting by a friend who had always lived in town. When she saw the well-dressed, well-groomed women at the meeting, she whispered to me, 'But these aren't real farmers' wives.' So I asked every one who had milked cows at daybreak that morning to hold up her hand. Every hand went up. Then I asked how many had gathered eggs and worked in the garden. Again the hands went up.

"My friend came away from that meeting convinced the old-time hayseed type of country woman is as extinct as the dodo. Which is about right."

A Mating Season Declared By Nanking "Door of Hope"

NANKING Aug. 27.—Former slave girls and concubines are candidates for marriage as a Nanking institution known as "The Door of Hope" announces "a new mating season will be held during the last week in August."

Nineteen inmates were married off in the June "mating season;" they had a wide latitude in choice, as 151 men filed applications.

"The Door of Hope" educates its girls in domestic arts, keeping them for periods of from six months to a year. A 20-to-40-dollar fee goes to "The Door of Hope" from any man marrying one of the girls, as an "educational fee."

The open season on wives is managed like this: Photographs of the prospective graduates are hung in a room for a week. Wife-hunters come in to inspect. The selections made, the husband-to-be sends in his references with his name, age, occupation, income and a photograph.

If the application is found satisfactory to the girl and the institution the suitor comes courting. Her consent, and the marriage is quickly arranged.

Government officials and employes, small shop owners, clerks, servants, janitors, laborers and one private soldier were among the June applicants, according to the Canadian Press.

People Differ On Shampoos, So Take Care!

The Right Soap for One May Injure Another; How to Choose.

By Frances Mangum.

THE shampoo that is fine for Aunt Lucy isn't necessarily the right kind for Cousin Sue. And, yet, how many families, friends and relatives base their choice of shampoos on casual recommendations! Instead of consulting a hair specialist who will tell that what sort of care their hair needs, instead of reading the directions on the shampoo to see whether it is prescribed for oily or dry hair, instead of wisely weighing recommendations by considering the comparative conditions of the hair, they buy a tar, a lemon, or an olive oil shampoo because somebody has said it was good.

As a matter of fact, dry hair, oily hair, normal hair all require different shampoos.

One of the best for oily hair is tincture of green soap, available at any drug store. There is another kind in a powder form made from an old Swedish "recipe" which is sold at a downtown store. Either of these may be highly recommended for oily conditions of the hair.

Dry hair will take on added luster if it is shampooed every two or three weeks with a tar soap, or else a liquid tar shampoo. The latter is mixed also with oil of pine and has the pungent and refreshing aroma of pine needles.

Nothing can supersede pure castile soap for normal hair. This may be purchased in cake form, or as a liquid put out by a group of hair specialists.

Blondes may preserve the highlights of their hair, and the natural golden sheen by always shampooing it in lemon soap, and rinsing it in water with lemon juice added. This not only serves as a mild bleach, but it gives the hair that delightful lemon fragrance.

One of the best things in the world for falling hair is salt and water. Add enough salt to a small bowl of water to make it briny and then apply this to the scalp with absorbent cotton. Massage it in well. It should remain on for half an hour. Now shampoo the hair with warm water and be careful to remove all traces of salt. This treatment is also excellent for oil hair.

Movie Clothes Need "Taming" For Home Use

Hollywood, Aug. 27 (AP).—This business of women copying the clothing styles they see in the movies is all right to some extent, but a certain discretion should be used, Omar Kiam, New York designer, said today.

Kiam, who is here under contract to Samuel Goldwyn de signing costumes for Anna Sten in a new picture, said he recognized the screen "exerts the greatest influence upon the style-consciousness of the country today."

"But," he emphasized, "sometimes it is not so good for a woman to carbon-copy the gown of her favorite actress, just because it may have looked well on the actress.

"It is important to keep in mind that screen styles are designed for a certain actress in keeping with her characterization in a certain picture, and the environment of its plot. In the same way, the smart woman who wishes to adapt the actress' gown for herself should keep in mind her own individuality and the environment in which she will wear that gown."

Kiam said screen styles mostly are "greatly exaggerated."

"They have to be to register effectively.

"That is why a strict adaptation of a screen style is likely to appear fantastic in ordinary surroundings.

"The wisely chic woman will choose the best features of her favored screen gowns and adapt them to her own particular needs."

Grecian Theater Is Built in Ohio

Teacher Realizes Dream During Convalescence.

Coshocton, Ohio, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Some people have rock gardens. Others "collect." But Everett Lowary's hobby is a delightful Grecian theater occupying an acre and a half of ground by his home. Unable to teach for several years on account of heart disease, Lowary has devoted full attention to the project.

A small hill has been shaved down, the slope terraced to provide seats for 200 in the outdoor amphitheater. At the foot of the hill, a tiny flower-lined stream serves as a front for the stage, thus providing a continuous growing setting. And in the garden—thousands of lilies, rock plants, iris, a memory lane of tea roses grown from cuttings sent by friends, interested in the project, now two years old.

A honeysuckle division includes plants sent by Julia Grey Jennings and Ethel Gray, of Zanesville, Ohio, cousins of Zane Grey, the author. The rock garden section holds specimens from a wide scattering of States, most of them gifts of friends, all catalogued.

Parisian Street Singing Is Revived by Artists

Street singing, no longer allowed in central parks of Paris and not officially in the outskirts, has received a new lease on life since artists have been permitted to give performances at important street corners.

This permission was granted to those volunteers who want to raise funds for the Foyer des Artistes, according to the Paris correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. This organization distributes free meals to unemployed singers, actors and artists.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: My husband and I have had several serious disagreements on the subject of my working. We have two children, aged six and four, and a little bungalow home in the suburbs. I was a capable secretary, earning good money, before I married. When I married, it was for family life and children, although I have never been particularly domestic. I never expected to go back to work, but three years ago, my husband lost his job. For a time we were without income, and I looked around for a job and found one.

* * * *

I held it until the second child was coming, although in the meantime my husband had found another and better job. He seemed very relieved when I gave up my work. Six months ago an offer of a job came to me.

* * * *

Against my husband's wishes, I took the job. By means of it, I have been able to provide our home with many comforts and it enabled me to hire a good housekeeper who does a better job of housekeeping than I ever did. I never cared much for the routine of sweeping, cooking, dusting, washing, bedmaking. I really believe I am a better wife and mother as a business woman than as a home-staying woman. I know I enjoy my children more, and they seem to find me a better playfellow than when I was with them all day.

* * * *

But my husband says I am putting my own selfish happiness before his happiness and the welfare of the children. We have had several violent quarrels. He says I only want to work so I can have money to spend in beauty parlors and on clothes. He hints I am out to attract other men. I think he is really jealous of my earning ability.

I make exactly the same salary he does.

* * * *

Do you think I am within my rights to make my own decision in this matter? I am devoted to my husband, and would be even more devoted if he were more reasonable about this matter.

WORKING WOMAN.

Happiness vs. Work.

DEAR WORKING WOMAN: Theoretically, every adult individual has the right to make his own decision regarding those things vitally affecting his happiness and well-being.

* * * *

But in marriage two individual personalities and lives are merged into one. Hence—if the relationship is to be preserved as a unit, neither husband nor wife can execute a decision which strikes at the happiness and well-being of the other.

* * * *

As in any partnership, decisions affecting its stability must be amicably worked out between the members of the firm. When one member is flat-footedly committed against a certain course of action, the only alternative of the other partner is to drop the issue or dissolve the partnership.

* * * *

What you must consider is whether a present release from the monotonous routine of housework is worth the probable loss of your domestic set-up.

* * * *

If forced to choose between devoting the remainder of your life to domestic duties or to being an economically self-sustaining wage earner, which would you elect?

* * * *

With your husband's attitude what it is, I am afraid such a choice does confront you, whether or not you realize and recognize it. You are dealing a severe blow to his self respect; developing in him a pronounced sense of inferiority and defiance.

* * * *

As for the children, they need suffer little, if at all, by your working, providing your husband were willing you do so. But they will be sure to suffer in a household divided against itself.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Policewoman for 20 Years Launches Career as Lawyer

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (AP).—Anna L. Sheridan spent 20 years of her life putting people in jail. Now she hopes to spend the next 20 trying to keep them out.

It is partly because she has never much enjoyed seeing folks go to jail that she is retiring as a Chicago policewoman September 1 to start a new career as a lawyer.

"Ever since I was a girl of 14 I wanted to be a lawyer," Mrs. Sheridan recalled today. But it was not until her children were grown and she had become a grandmother that she had her chance.

Her father vetoed a legal career for her at the start.

"There are matters discussed in court," he said sternly, "that no girl should listen to."

Ten Year's Skill.

Then marriage submerged such thoughts. A few years later when she found herself a widow with three children to support, there was no time to be choosey about careers. What she needed was a job and she found one on the police force. Appointed in 1914, she was one of Chicago's first policewomen.

Her job took her into juvenile court. For ten years she worked for the State's attorney, preparing criminal cases for the grand jury, interviewing girls, dredging up facts, getting at the truth they tried to hide. In court daily she listened to the proceedings, grew expert at appraising evidence.

It was good training for a prospective lawyer, and gradually her girlhood ambition was rekindled. Finally she took the plunge and enrolled in a law school.

Seven Years' Study.

"It was an awful grind," Mrs. Sheridan admitted. "It took me seven years, working all day, studying law at night, doing housework and taking care of my family at the same time."

In five years she had her degree. Two years later she obtained a master's degree and was admitted to the bar.

Today, at an age when most women contemplate only a placid role as a grandmother, fireside, knitting and such, Anna Sheridan, policewoman, eagerly plans the start of a new professional career—her real one.

PILLAR to POST

MR. LAWRENCE WOOD (Chip) Robert, jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, experienced the same sensations Rip Van Winkle must have felt, when recently early one morning he vaguely heard the call:

"Wake up, granddaddy, it's time to get up."

* * * *

He opened one sleepy eye on a very pretty dark-eyed young lady who looked like his daughter Louisa. But it couldn't be Louisa—hadn't she called him granddaddy? An alarming thought stirred his half-stupor. Could he have been asleep for 20 years? He groped for his chin half expecting to find a long white beard. He pulled himself up in bed imagining he heard his joints creak.

* * * *

"What's happened?" he demanded.

"It's a girl," answered the dark-eyed one cryptically.

"What's a girl?" asked Mr. Robert, still not quite awake.

"Why, your granddaughter," she answered (it was Louisa, after all). "She was born last night."

Thus it was the news was broken to him that during the night he had become a grandfather for the first time, when a child was born to his son, L. W. Robert 3d in Atlanta, Ga., a week ago.

* * * *

James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator, also became a grandfather for the first time not more than three weeks ago. Certainly it can be claimed both are the youngest looking grandfathers in the New Deal.

Mr. Robert and Mr. Moffett are remarkably similar boyish types, appearing much younger than they could possibly be. Both are darkly handsome, with affable manners and pleasant smiles. One might judge Mr. Moffett to be anywhere between 27 and 35; the fact that he is up in his 40's seems incredible. Mr. Robert is not much over 40, having been graduated from Georgia Tech just 23 years before his son acquired his degree there. Both married young, Mr. Robert immediately upon leaving college, while his son did not wait until he finished school to be married.

Lighthouse Keeper Likes Lonely Life

She's Been Living It for 34 Years Now.

Lloyd Harbor Village, Long Island, Aug. 27 (Spl.)—Living alone with two dogs and "not bothered" by a radio or telephone, Miss Agnes Harrigan is rounding out her thirty-fifth year as keeper of the old Lloyd Harbor Lighthouse. She is so unaffected by loneliness that she hopes to remain at her post for a full 40 years.

She rows a mile several times a week for her mail, supplies for the winter have to be gathered in one lump in the fall and occasional high tides flood her cellar, but still Miss Harrigan likes the life.

Ice covered the bay last winter for several weeks. She wanted her mail and so she walked.

Miss Harrigan first started her lighthouse life as housekeeper for Keeper Robert McGlone, in 1900. A new lighthouse was built in 1912 to which Mr. McGlone was transferred leaving her in full charge of the old light as caretaker and keeper.

U. S. Provincialism Is Declared Not So

Press Is Given Credit for International Trend.

New York, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Mr. Sinclair Lewis to the contrary, America is declared the least provincial country in the world by Dr. Russell Porter, director of the institute of arts and sciences of Columbia University.

Dr. Porter, shortly returned from a tour of European capitals, attributes American interest in international affairs to the press and the good work of the United States correspondents abroad.

Younger men in Europe, said Dr. Porter, seem convinced nationalism must be stopped. Their recently formed political and social clubs are working to that end.

Peace Optimism Is Expressed

The Kellogg Pact Seen as Moral Contract as Well as Legal.

THAT the world in August, 1928, set out to remake the laws of the nations concerning war still remains a token of the high hopes and high dreams of human beings, said Miss Emma Wold, Washington lawyer, and member of the National Congressional Committee of the Woman's International League, yesterday in a radio address observing the sixth anniversary of the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact.

"The promise to give up war as a means of settling differences between nations is a promise to give up fear as a guiding motive in dealings between peoples, and to substitute the antidote of fear, love and good will," said Miss Wold.

"I like to think of a treaty, not as a paper that can be scrapped and is therefore futile, but as a moral as well as a legal contract which cannot be broken without dishonor to the nations that break it.

"That it is sometimes broken does not violate the strength or sanctity of the pledge it makes, nor does it render the pact a failure."

The Kellogg Pact carried the nations of the world into a world of good will and good neighborly policy six years ago, declared Miss Wold.

"If the pledge then made still stands merely as a principle fervently desired by the masses; if it has not been translated into action; if on the contrary it has been violated; that does not prove that the treaty is vain, nor does it prove that the principle it expresses is merely a pious wish incapable of ripening into action when the leaders of men, whether in Europe, the Americas or the Far East, begin to see eye to eye with their people."

Yankee Trails Rainbow in Trial Run

Light Wind Marks Race; Committee's Task Now Muddled.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27 (AP).—Rainbow, Harold S. Vanderbilt's new candidate for the defense of the America's Cup, today defeated the leading aspirant for that honor, Yankee, skippered by Charles Francis Adams, by 3 minutes, 7 seconds, over a 30-mile triangular course.

The result somewhat complicated the task of the committee empowered with the job of selecting a defender against the challenge of T. O. M. Sopwith's British Endeavour in the cup series next month. It was Yankee's first defeat of the final trials and temporarily placed Rainbow in the lead so far as the trials are concerned.

Rainbow now has won three races and lost one, beating Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, now eliminated from the series, twice and Yankee once. Yankee now has defeated Rainbow and Weetamoe and lost to Rainbow.

Await Wind for Start.

Today's course gave the two rivals a beat, a reach and a run, in that order, in very light air. The race committee whistled for a wind for an hour and 45 minutes after the scheduled starting time before sending the sloops on their way against a 6 2-5 knots southeasterly breeze. The wind had increased to 7 1-5 knots and shifted to South by east at the finish.

Although Rainbow's victory today evened her score with Yankee for the final trial series, the Boston boat still was far in the lead on a basis of the two previous preliminary series. Last week, in their first meeting of this series, Yankee outsailed Rainbow and Adams outmaneuvered Vanderbilt.

Endeavour on Course.

The British challenger, Tom Sopwith's Endeavour, was out on the open ocean course again today with Vanitie. Gerard Lambert's old and now ineligible cup boat. They engaged in a series of brushes, most of which were too distant for observers of the cup candidiates to obtain accurate information.

However, as the Big Blue challenger and Vanitie were running home, it was quite apparent that Endeavour was able to keep on even or better terms with Vanitie off the wind.

The summary:

Start 1:25; course 30 mile triangle; wind, 6.4 to 7.2 knots, southeast to south by east.

Cardinals Blasted By Dodgers, 10-1

St. Louis Pitchers Target of 16-Hit Barrage.

St. Louis, Aug. 27 (AP).—Tom Zachary, veteran of 18 years major league competition, today handed the pennant hopes of the Cardinals a setback as he pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 10-to-1 victory. The defeat left the Cards six and one-half games back of the league-leading Giants and two games to the rear of the second-place Cubs.

The Cards got to Zachary for 11 hits but the veteran southpaw kept the blows widely separated. Only in the first were the Cardinals able to bunch enough of their hits to score a run. Meanwhile the Dodgers drove Tex Carleton from the mound in the fifth after scoring three runs in the second and fourth innings and continued their 16-hit attack off Dazzy Vance, Jess Haines and Jim Mooney.

Furr Must Oppose Wilson When Ready

Commission Allows Illness Claim of Fighter, but Orders Him to Meet Rival in Next D. C. Bout; Pleads Unfamiliarity With Rules.

OVERWHELMED by a mass of medical testimony adroitly maneuvered by a legal light, the Boxing Commission yesterday settled the case of Phil Furr by meeting the Disappearing Dutchman halfway and grantng him all the time he desired to attain what he consideres proper physical condition, but insisting that he swap punches with Bob Wilson when ne is satisfied he is ready to fight. The commission's decision culminated several weeks of bickering and consideration that followed Furr's refusal to box Wilson in a Riding and Hunt Club main event for which he had been signed by his duly accredited manager, Harry Groves.

Dr. Charles A. Goettling, Furr's personal physician, testified that nis patient was in generally run-down condition, and had been in that condition for some time. He told the commission that he had repeatedly urged Furr to discontinue fighting and take a long rest to rebuild his health, but that Phil had insisted on continuing to fight until he had attained the top ranking among local welterweights.

Intestinal Flu Complaint.

Dr. Goettling testified further that after Furr had been signed by Groves for the Wilson bout, which was scheduled for August 20, he had tried to train, but was unable to do so because of intestinal influenza. Furr trained three days, August 8, 9 and 10, following the signing of the articles for the fight on August 7, Dr. Goettling told reporters, and suffered intensely after each training session.

Dr. Curtis Le Hall, prominent orthopedic surgeon, testified in Furr's behalf that he had been treating the boxer's right wrist for an injury received in fighting in February and that X-rays showed an old fracture healed at the low end of the radius. This resulted in a functional weakness in the right forearm with atrophy in the right forearm.

Harry Groves told the commission that Furr had first warned him of his intention not to fight Wilson as scheduled by saying he did not wish to meet a boxer without a reputation.

Furr stated that he was very anxious to meet Wilson, whom he felt confident he could beat, but that he did not wish to meet him until he had achieved perfect fighting condition. He pointed out to the commission that his objective was the same as theirs—to definitely decide the question of superiority between himself and Wilson.

Must Fight Wilson.

Whereupon, the commission decided that Furr should immediately report to the commission the fact of his physical fitness when he considered himself fit to fulfill his contract, at which time he would be examined by one of the commission's physicians and if found fit to go on, would be required to fight Wilson at such time as Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn of the Riding and Hunt Club might designate. Until this contract is fulfilled, Furr will not be permitted to meet any other contestant in the District of Columbia.

Furr further told the commission that his failure to notify them that he was not able to fight was attributable to his own unfamiliarity with the rules of the commission rather than an intentional disregard thereof.

The commission was represented by Chairman Lucian Vandoren and Maj. E. W. Brown, of the Police Department, Commissioner Buchholz being absent.

Ruth's Double Gives Yanks 3-2 Win

Pinch-Hit in 7th Drives in Two Mates to Beat Out White Sox.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (AP).—Babe Ruth, appearing in the role of a pinch-hitter, came through with a much needed double today to give the New York Yankees a 3-to-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox. The victory failed to cut into the Tigers' 4½ game lead, however, as Detroit also won.

Batting for Jimmy Deshong, who was engrossed in a pitchers' battle with Milton Gaston, the Babe cracked out a seventh-inning two-bagger, scoring two of his teammates. The Yanks were trailing 2-to-1 when Ruth stepped to the plate.

Sox Take Early Lead.

The Sox had made a run in the first on singles by Al Simmons and Luke Appling, and Manager Dykes' double, and counted again in the seventh when Simmons drove Gaston home with another single.

The Yankees made their first run in the fourth on a double by Ben Chapman, followed by Lou Gehrig's single. Johnny Murphy finished the game for the Yanks, holding the pale hose to one hit in the last two frames.

Giants Are Held To 3 Hits by Lee, of Cubs

World Champions Beaten Second Time in Row, 1-0, Before 25,000.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (AP).—Holding the world's champions to three hits, as did his pitching colleague, Lon Warneke yesterday, Big Bill Lee today shaded Hal Schumacher in a brilliant pitching duel to give the Chicago Cubs their second straight victory over the New York Giants. The score was 1 to 0.

"Tut" Stainback's seventh-inning double, following Kiki Cuyler's single, brought home the only run of the game and reduced the Giants' advantage over the Cubs to four and one-half games.

A crowd of 25,000, the largest Monday turn-out at Wrigley Field in several seasons, saw Schumacher match the Cubs' freshman right-hander for six scoreless innings. The break came in the seventh, however, and Cuyler, already on his way to second, sprinted home as Stainback slashed a double against the left-field wall, fair only by inches.

Cuyler was the only Cub to pass second and Stainback the only other Chicagoan to reach the keystone bag as they were held to five hits by Schumacher. He did not issue a base on balls, while Lee gave four free tickets to first. Only three Giants got as far as second, however.

The victory was Lee's eleventh of the season, three of which were scored at the expense of the Giants, who have yet to defeat him. The defeat was Schumacher's sixth setback, as against 19 victories.

Cubs, Still After Flag, Pass Up Sox Series

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—On the theory that they might overhaul the New York Giants and win the National League pennant, the Chicago Cubs today decided to pass up the annual city series with the White Sox.

The White Sox won last year's series, so it was up to the Cubs to do the challenging.

"The Cubs are still trying to win the flag and will continue to do so right up to the finish of the race," said President William Walker of the club, thus explaining that the Cubs don't want a city series on their minds during the stretch drive.

Long Shot Scores In Chicago Feature

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Secret Tryst, a horse that has a habit of coming to life when odds are long, won the feature race at Hawthorne today in a spectacular head finish over Mrs. W. T. Westrope's Strait Jacket.

Secret Tryst, owned by John Emery and ridden by Jockey H. Bagur, ran the six-furlong distance in 1:13 and paid $39.78 in the mutuels. Al Jolson was third in the dash with Rubio, the heavy favorite, out of the money.

Form players had a bad day at Hawthorne today as one long shot after another won.

Westminster Clubs Split Bill; Shilling Fans Nine

Westminster, Md., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The Westminster A. A. and the Westminster Eagles divided honors in a double-header played yesterday on the Herr diamond near Westminster. The Westminster A. A. took the first game with a final score of 13-3, while the Eagles won the nightcap, 3-2.

The Westminster Eagles chalked up two tallies in the first inning of the opening game and maintained the lead until the third, when the A. A. scored five runs. Shilling, A. A. twirler, struck out nine men in the first game.

Sarron Wins On Foul in Sixth

3,500 See Bass Lose on Low Blow in Stadium Feature.

APALPABLY low right-hand punch that sent Petey Sarron writhing to the floor in agony, delivered Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, from an ignominious defeat over the scheduled 10-round route and resulted in award of last night's feature at Griffith Stadium bout to Sarron on a foul in the sixth round.

Beaten, battered and bewildered by Sarron's ceaseless punching, the heavily favored Bass had not been able to win a round of the first five when he rushed Sarron to a neutral corner after a minute of the sixth and was getting the better of a furious exchange when he unleashed the climatic blow.

The punch, a vicious right, found a mark far below Sarron's belt and the transplanted Alexandria Syrian crumpled to the floor in apparent anguish, both hands clasped to the injured territory. Referee Howard Livingston sent the protesting Bass to his corner with one-ear attuned for the knockout timekeeper's count as Sarron lay writhing beneath the ropes precariously close to the edge of the ring.

Referee Calls Foul.

As the seconds of both Sarron and Bass shouted for favorable decisions, Referee Livingston gave his verdict to Announcer Jimmy Lake, who transmitted to the crowd of 3,500 the award of the bout to Sarron on a foul.

The famed right hand of Bass was conspicuously absent from the start as Sarron took the play away from the former junior lightweight champion of the world with his well-known flurries of punching that Bass was at a loss to combat.

Only twice did Bass land his right, jarring Sarron in the third and again in the fifth, but the Syrian evinced no ill effects, and was back at Bass immediately with his windmill offensive, scoring heavily to Bass' face.

Bass went down once, in the fourth round, from the combined effect of a Sarron right and a slip, but he was up without a count. The Post scoresheet showed that of the first five rounds, Sarron won four, with one, the fifth, even.

Eddie Hogan, the Waterbury (Conn.), heavyweight hope, hammered Chester Matan, of New York, for eight rounds to take a unanimous decision in a grueling semi-final. Matan opened with better form than he displayed against Hogan in the preliminary to the Carnera-Baer shambles, but the sizzling left hook and right cross of Billy Duffy's newest protege soon wore him down to a slow canter which relieved the Brooklyn burp from the multitude in the last three rounds.

Bob Turner, the Norfolk knockerout, dumped Otto Kushmer for the full count in the second round of a preliminary scheduled for six periods. The end came in seriocomic fashion midway of the second. After 1 minute and 15 seconds, Turner dumped Kushmer upside down with a right for a two count. After 1 minute and 30 seconds he dumped him flat on his face for a count that might just as well have been 100.

Joe Green soundly trounced Joe Gorman in a six-round preliminary that failed to satisfy the customers. The Washington lad was willing to make a fight of it, but Gorman seemed content to stay the distance, with the result that the combined efforts of Joe-Joe were more or less wasted.

Wild Bill Howell won on a third-round technical knockout from Tony Uraine in an opener scheduled for four. Uraine hit the deck for a six count in the first and a nine count in the second and was apparently ready to kiss the canvas for the doleful dole when Referee Charley Reynolds intervened.

Tigers Maul Athletics, 11 to 0

Bridges Hurls Brilliantly, Holding Mackmen to 5 Blows.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27 (AP).—With Tom Bridges allowing only five scattered hits for his first victory of the Detroit Tigers' Eastern invasion, the American League leaders scored in a romp over the Philadelphia Athletics today, winning 11 to 0.

The Tigers started strong and finished in the same manner, banging out 14 hits, including three each by Manager Mickey Cochrane and Marvin Owen and a home run by "Goose" Goslin.

The victory, coming while the Yanks were scoring a victory over the White Sox, enabled the Tigers to keep their lead of 4½ games.

Joe Cascarella's wildness helped the Bengals get off to a 3-run lead in the second inning. Making only one hit, a single by Owen, the Tigers were assisted, to three free tickets to first, a hit-batsman and an error by Dib Williams.

They added three more runs in the next two frames, nicked the plate with one in the sixth and wound up with a 4-run assault on the rookie hurler, Lagger, in the ninth.

Meanwhile Bridges sailed along with never a worry. He walked three men, but three fast plays wiped out potential Athletic rallies.

Eleanor Holm and her husband, Arthur Jarrett.

Backstroke Champion and Wife of Actor-Singer Art Jarrett Will Quit Amateurs to Swim in Movies—but Not Before Olympics.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (AP).—Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the girl who would rather be a swimming champion than a motion-picture star, said today she probably would turn professional after the next Olympic games, unless by some good fortune before then she doesn't need the money.

"Professional" to Eleanor means what most 20-year-old girls would trade their eye-teeth for—a career on the screen.

"You see, if I swam in the movies and was paid for it, I'd lose my amateur standing," she explained. "That's why I dropped a two-year contract with Warner Brothers after nine months—because they wanted me to swim.

"Swimming is play and the movies are work. I'm afraid I like to swim better than anything else. Every year I say 'this is my last race,' but when anyone says something about turning professional, I say 'no.' There's something about athletics that gets you.

"But after the next Olympics I'll probably turn professional and make what money there is to be made by it. I'll probably wind up by doing a Tarzan picture with Johnny Weissmuller."

Winner of the Olympic backstroke championship when she was only 19, Miss Holm said she feels infinitely better after winning a race than in making a picture.

"There's more of a thrill in it," she said. "It's hard work to train, but there's a great satisfaction, too. When I see myself on the screen, I think I look awful—I get up and walk out.

"Movie stars lead a wearying life. When they're working, they can't go out on all these parties you hear about. They have to be up at 7 or so and working out on location under those hot lights—and, believe me, they're hot. Sometimes they take the same scene 20 or 30 times, and it's awfully boring."

Miss Holm doesn't believe, however, in two careers in one family.

"If my husband becomes an important star—and he probably will, too—I'll never work," she declared. "He'd father have me swim than work. He has the old-fashioned idea that the man should earn the money."

But the swimmer disclosed that she, too, has an old-fashioned idea.

"I think more of his career than my own."

She is interested in her husband's career and swimming and nothing else, she added. Although she won fifth place in the Olympic backstroke race when she was only 14, she never walks a step if she can ride.

Pirates Stop Braves, 8-5; French Ejected

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27 (AP).—Battling for a place in the first division, Pittsburgh moved up to within 3 games of the fourth-place Braves today downing Boston 8 to 5 with rallies in the seventh and eighth innings.

The game was held up for 10 minutes in the first inning on a disputed decision of Umpire Quigley, who ruled Pitcher Larry French had dropped Jordan's liner. French had gone through the motion of a double play by throwing to third. Quigley ended the argument by ejecting the southpaw.

Full Fields Entered for Opening of Marlboro's 5-Day Race Meeting This Afternoon

7-Race Card To Start at 2 o'Clock

Feature Draws Field of 13; Officials of Track Optimistic.

PICTURESQUE Marlboro is prepared today to welcome hundreds, if not thousands, of Washingtonian's to its spic-and-span half-mile track, where for the remainder of the week the "sport of kings" will hold forth on the banks of the Patuxent River. Deprived of legalized horse racing within the confines of the District by not more than a pair of noses during the last session of Congress, Capital fans have only to motor 20 miles down Highway No. 4 this afternoon to have their "day at the races."

Post-time for the first race is 2 o'clock and 71 horses were named overnight for the seven races. As usual, the program consists entirely of claiming events but limit fields of closely matched horses will compete in at least six contests. Full entry lists for the meeting are assured. More than 200 horses were shipped in from Cumberland over the week-end and many others arrived from points in Virginia and Maryland, as well as Northern and Western tracks.

Banner Meet Foreseen.

The success of the Cumberland meeting last week, which showed a decided increase in both attendance and betting, has led officials of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair Association to believe that, given a break in the weather, Marlboro will have the best session since 1930.

Race enthusiasts have been afforded a better line on Marlboro horses this year than ever before. The long session at Charles Town, W. Va., saw many of the thoroughbreds entered at the nearby course in action. Today's fifth race, looked upon as the feature, has drawn a field of 13 and will find winners of races at Charles Town and Cumberland matched at 5½ furlongs. Worthington and King of Hearts have been assigned top weight of 115 pounds. Rustic, Cuba, Tuleyries Wand, Stylish Mack and other Capital favorites are slated to compete.

Edward S. Welter will do the starting and his work at Cumberland stamped him as an expert. He had a near-perfect record for the 35 races up-State. Manager Mort Mahoney and Assistant Manager Dave Heisman have the mutuel department ready for the battle of the "iron men."

Officials of the host association, are M. Hampton Magruder, president; Joseph B. Boyle, general manager; Thomas K. Lynch, treasurer; William G. Brooke, secretary, and Mortimer M. Mahoney, mutuel manager.

Army Poloists Rewarded After Triumph Over Greenbrier

Miss Vera Miller, of New Orleans, presents to the United States Army team from Washington individual cups emblematic of their victory over the Greenbrier four, at Greenbrier, W. Va. The Army team will be seen in action in Washington next month against the Mexico army four in the annual international matches. Left to right—Lieut. C. H. Reed, Lieut. Gordon Rogers, Miss Miller, Lieut. George Gunert and Lieut. Col. J. K. Devers.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Marlboro Race Track.

Marlboro . . . oh, boy . . . beautiful women and handsome men gather round the old water barrel . . . southern Maryland hospitality . . . the corn and tobacco exhibits . . . the boys and girls in riding togs . . . climb the hill over by the water tower . . . to see the races . . . the big grove of trees and the parking space that would bring $2,000 a day at Thirteenth and F streets . . . the hustle and bustle that ceases around the courthouse when the races begin . . . the feel of real earth under your feet . . . a relief from hot concrete . . . the trim little stands . . . with the home-like atmosphere . . . the first Marlboro meeting since repeal . . . the half-mile track with a chute . . . the horses banking the turns . . . in merry-go-round fashion . . . the colored boys discussing a "good thing" as they hold the blankets in the infield . . . hesitating bettors studying their programs just off the $2 show line . . . but no Clocker Mike . . . unless I find him this morning. BILL.

First race—Canoble Lake showed a world of early speed in that last outing at Cumberland, but threw up the sponge just short of the 5-furlong mark. Goes a half-furlong farther today, but I'm stringing along. May be hard to catch over this kind of a course. By Surprise's last was a good effort and deserves respect. Jinnee is better than recent races and is a possible upsetter.

Second race—Barn Stormer won in the Midwest and returns to compete with the former Charles Town and Cumberland gang. Seems suited by the race and a win would not surprise me. Hurdy Gurdy and Viva Pete to complete the picture. The last named will find the route too short, I do believe.

Third race—Easter Herald was buffeted about in his last start at Cumberland. Clear sailing today will find this fellow taking the main end of the purse. Big Dipper has that last win to recommend her and should Eddie Smith return to the saddle she will have some say in the purse distribution. Lady Buck for the show.

Fourth race—Lodorus turned in her last victory over a mile-and-a-sixteenth route. However, 6½ furlongs is her best distance and I'm expecting her to take this field in camp. Justa Teacher's last was encouraging. Mint Bed to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Tuleyries Wand turned in a pair of victories last week at Cumberland and is the natural choice here, although the opposition is slightly better. Rustic Cuba, if moved out of the also-eligible group, will be dangerous. The veteran Benish Way has been trained on the grounds and may go well at the first asking.

Sixth race—Infille and Potion finished one, two in their meeting at Cumberland and I expect the order to remain the same today. Golden Castle ran well last out and any improvement would find this one in the thick of the going at the finish line.

Seventh race—Wishing Star defeated better than these at Cumberland. Needs only to run back to that race. Aella, speedy away from the barrier, will have to be caught. Bokie B for the rest.

Peacock's 68 Ties Course Record

Par Shattered by Youthful D. C. Golfer in P.G.A. Tournament.

USING a new set of clubs, Roger Peacock, 23-year-old Indian Spring golf star, pounded out a 68, 1 under par, yesterday at Woodmont Country Club in the Middle Atlantic pro-amateur sweepstakes to tie the course record held by A. B. Thorn, former Woodmont pro.

Peacock teamed with George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, to win the pro-amateur event with a best ball of 67. Diffenbaugh gave his youthful protege help on the first hole, which he won with a birdie 3, and Peacock did his stuff on the remaining holes.

Deuce on Fourteenth.

The Indian Spring amateur shot a 34 on the first nine, with a birdie 3 on the seventh hole, and scored a 34 on the incoming side with the aid of a birdie deuce on the 230-yard fourteenth. Here he reached the green comfortably and nailed a 15-foot putt. Going over only the twelth, where he took a 5, Peacock played well nigh perfect golf with his new sticks, reaching every green except one in orthodox figures and following a straight line throughout the day. Peacock had a chance for a 67, but missed a 5-footer on the eighteenth green.

Tied for second prize in the pro-amateur were three teams. They were Al Houghton and Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood; Cliff Spencer and Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, and his kid brother, John, of Kenwood. Each team posted a 68.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAND CLOUD, $6.20, $3.90, $3.50; HOGANS FOX, $12.10, $6.00; MAD BULL, $3.80.

SAND CLOUD moved up on the outside, went to the front nearing the completion of the opening quarter-mile, increased his lead steadily rounding the turn and was never menaced, running well within himself at the close. HOGANS FOX, restrained early, moved up stoutly after leaving the back stretch and closed with good energy through the stretch, though unable to endanger the winner. MAD BULL, away well, lacked speed to hold his position, but came gamely in the final furlong. ALARIC, under urging throughout, came to the outside for the closing issue and closed gamely. STROLLING MISS made a determined effort to go along with the pace and weakened in the last three furlongs. WESTYS DUKE tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upwards; maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:68. Off at 3:00. Winner, Mr. Harvey's ch. g. TROBOY went to the front in the opening furlong, drew into a good lead, was rated along under slight restraint and, hard ridden at the end, lasted to hold HEEDLESS GAL safe. The latter improved her position gradually and, coming to the outside in the stretch, closed determinedly. SUNNY SADIE moved up fast leaving the back stretch and held on gamely under pressure in the closing three-sixteenths. TIMBER TRUMP, in closest attendance of the early pace, faltered in the final furlong. SUN CLOISTER, away fast, was taken under slight restraint and was unable to improve his position when called upon. FURFUR closed a good gap. SILVER WRACK went wide and tired for the first half-mile.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upwards. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:31. Winner, A. H. Schneiderman's ch. g. Five National Qualifiers To Play

Vinson, Shorey, McCarthy, Drain, Dettweiler Will Compete.

A FIELD of 38 golfers, including the defending champion, Dick Lunn, of Chevy Chase, and Washington's five qualifiers for the National Amateur championship, will tee off tomorrow afternoon at Columbia Country Club in the 18-hole medal round of the District championship.

Every prominent private club golfer is entered in the tournament, which goes match play for the first time in more than a decade. Pairings and starting times show that Harry Pitt, of Manor, former District champion, and M. Parker Nolan, of Indian Spring, fire off first at 1 p. m. The remaining twosomes will leave the tee at five-minute intervals. Champion Lunn is paired with Frank Goodwin, jr., of Congressional at 2:05.

McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, and Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, who qualified for the National Amateur in the sectional trials at Five Farms last week, are entered in the event. Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, champion in 1932, and Frank Roesch, another former titleholder, will compete. Peacock is strongly favored to win back his laurels.

The course will be open again for practice rounds today. Post entries will be accepted. Participants have been requested to report on the tee promptly for the qualifying round.

Boston, Aug. 27 (AP).—Although outhit, the Cleveland Indians strengthened their hold on third place today by defeating the Boston Red Sox, 6-5, in the third game of their series. Willie Kamm's eighth inning two-bagger started the Indians' winning rally.

Nats Win

Myer came over with the run, and Bolton grounded to Melillo.

Jack Russell, in person, scored what turned out to be the winning run in the fourth, banging a surprise double to left field to open the inning. He went to third when Hadley tossed one to an old friend in the stands and scored on Meyer's single past third.

The Nats got another in the seventh when Hadley filled the bases by walking Bluege after Bolton doubled and Susko reached first on Burns' error. Bump then forced over Bolton by the simple process of walking Russell. Twice before Hadley had filled the bases and escaped damage, but slipping out of the hole three times was baiting fate too much.

Washington's big inning, however, was the eighth, when 3 runs clattered over the pan. Stone opened with a double off Andrews. Harris beat out a single to Clift and when Clift's throw to first bounded off Dave's shoulder, Stone continued home.

Cronin doubled to right, sending Harris to third, and Bolton was purposely passed, filling the bases. Harris dropped Schulte's hard liner, Harris scoring on the play and Cronin moving up to third. Susko forced Schulte, Cronin scoring. Bluege hit into a double play for the last two outs.

Russell passed Campbell and Melillo in the ninth, setting up mild hopes in the Brownies' breasts, but Russell scooped up Frankie Grube's drive, pegged it to Buddy Myer and Susko was almost knocked off his feet taking the throw, which completed a double play that ended hostilities.

Elder Benson Released By Nats

Bewhiskered Gent Goes to Albany; Newsom May Twirl Today.

By Frank H. Young.

HENCEFORTH and probably forever more, Pitcher Elder Allen Benson, the mattress-chinned graduate from the House of David, will unfurl his red whiskers to the gentle breezes of some other clime, for he was given his walking papers by the Nats yesterday. Thus ended Owner Clark Griffith's most noble experiment—his hope of getting a pitcher and a side-show attraction at one and the same time.

The good elder has been shipped to the Albany International League Club.

Figuring along the lines of "the better the day, the better the deed" and, bearing in mind the elder's religious tendencies, Manager Joe Cronin elected Benson as his Sabbath pitcher, starting him the last two Sundays. But after first the White Sox and then the Browns had "said it with hits," it was decided that the elder's room on the Nat roster, already at full strength, was better than his company.

So Elder Benson is now an Albany Senator and it seems that even there he will have to battle for his seat, for there is an International League rule that no "class players"—and the elder's stay here makes him a "class" man (don't ask "what class?")—can be used after August 15.

"Now that I got him, I don't know what to do with him. Joe Cambria, Albany president, who was here yesterday, moaned as he wrung his hands.

But the Elder need not worry. If Albany keeps title to him, it will have to pay him. And if the Senators turn him loose, he still has his flowing whiskers and probably can earn his eats by going back to Babe Didrikson and the other bearded "boys."

Louis (Buck) Newsom, the giant Brownie pitcher with the peculiar but effective delivery, may do the flinging against the Nats in the fourth game of the current set this afternoon. Newsom, it seems, has decided to become an "iron man." He worked for the Browns last Thursday, and then came back and finished the first game of a double-header with the A.s Saturday and lost a heartbreaking 3-2 second which saw him go the route.

Last night, Newsom told Pilot Rog Hornsby that he would like to take a fling at the Nats this afternoon—and he may do it. If not, Ed Wells, former Nat southpaw, will draw the assignment with Bobby Burke doing the mound-work for the home gang.

Burke, be it remembered, is going like a house afire these days, having won his last two starts with a total of but eight hits and one run garnered from his slants.

More bulletins about the Nat casualty squad:

Earl Whitehill, scheduled to pitch yesterday, reported by telephone before the game. He was suffering from a stomach disorder—from eating well but not wisely.

Infielder Cecil Travis further aggravated his charley horse while running out his pinch-hit in the ninth of Sunday's nightcap game and has been ordered back to bed.

Stagg Ready to Begin 45th Season as Coach

Stockton, Calif., Aug. 27 (AP). Amos Alonzo Stagg, 72-year-old coach of the College of Pacific football team, reported today for his forty-fifth gridiron campaign after a four-day automobile trip from Chicago. Stagg's schedule this year includes games with the University of Southern California and California.

Beaver Wins Shoot-Off For Clay Target Title

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 27 (AP). Walter Beaver, of Berwyn, Pa., 1933 grand American handicap champion, nosed out three other marksmen in a 75-target shoot-off today to capture the North American clay target championship, premier event of the first day's program at the American Trapshooting Association course here.

Beaver, Forest W. McNeir, of Houston, Tex.; Joe Heistand, of Hillsboro, Ohio, and Hale Jones, of East Alton, Ill., tied at 199-200, for the crown.

Mrs. Bunny Sanders, Keyser, W. Va., won the shoot-off for the women's North America title from Mrs. Don McClain, Atlanta, Ga., after they had tied at 191-200.

Times Have Changed.

You could have purchased a franchise in the National Football League for $50 not many years ago. Now one costs $10,000, if you can find a seller.

Wimbledon Cup Shoot Won by Frank Elwell

Camp Ferry, Ohio, Aug. 27 (AP). Frank Elwell, of Flint, Mich., won the Wimbledon Cup match from a field of 15 contestants here today as the National championship smallbore rifle tournament ended.

Elwell turned in a score of 99 out of a possible 100. C. G. Kallensee, Dayton, Ohio, was awarded second place.

The Wimbledon Cup match is a .30-caliber event.

Schmeling Echoes in U. S.

Training Camp Cook and Mushky Jackson Prick Ears at News of Return of Their Meal Ticket.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion of the world, stopped Walter Neusel, rival German heavyweight, in eight rounds in Hamburg, Germany, last Sunday, or rather beat him so badly that Neusel refused to come out for the ninth round, thus setting up the Germans nicely for the winter with an argument as to whether Schmeling won on a technical knockout in the eighth or ninth round.

Personally, I don't care. The point is that the Black Uhlan hoisted himself out the dreadful slump into which he fell after Baer knocked him out and operated successfully on a pretty fair heavyweight, one who had never been knocked down or out on this side and who had beaten some good heavyweights. It will work some profound changes on the lives of many individuals on this side of the Great Salt Ocean.

Somewhere in this vast crawling ant-heap of a city there is cook named Otto Weinman, a German living in a strange country far from his homeland, who understands how to make kartoffel pfannkuchen, klosse, sauerbraten, schnitzel and all the rest of the dishes including rotkohl and semmelknodel, so dear to the heart of the Germans. The victory of Max Schmeling, wherever Otto is today, must have brought a deep thrill to his heart and tears to his eyes.

Meals for Mushky.

There is another person who picked up Monday's paper with a sigh of profound relief. That is a curious party by the name of Mushky Jackson. You can bet that Jackson is not his real name, but everybody calls him Mushky anyway. Like so many kids, Mushky became general factotum for a prize-fight manager. He strapped his particular wagon to the star of another little Hebrew named Joey Jacobs, a product of Commerce High School, of New York, who himself started life running errands for other managers.

Jacobs became the world-famous manager of World's Champion Schmeling, and Mushky, ascending gently, one hand clamped around the Herr Direktor's coat-tails, saved his pennies seeking independence and fame and purchased himself in fond and doting hopes a pretty awful, pink-headed, cherub-faced heavyweight named Red Barry. Now, while he owned Red Barry outright and was his full and legal manager, Mushky continued to perform errands for Jacobs, swing towels and carry pails for sustenance. Red Barry was to him a sort of luxurious hobby like collecting South American orchids.

Schmeling scudded almost to the bottom of the pile in two unsuccessful brawls and returned to the European continent, whither also went Der Herr Direktor—and with them Mushky's meal ticket.

Red Barry thus became strictly a commercial proposition, and if you have ever been hard up and tried to sell your stamp albums or your antique furniture or your truly-stunning collection of dolls from all countries, who, you know what poor Mushky was up against.

King Levinsky Attempts Comeback as Contender

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—King Levinsky will start a comeback drive for consideration as a heavyweight championship contender against Art Sykes, hard-hitting Elmira, N. Y., heavyweight, at Wrigley Field, September 20.

The Kingfish and Sykes were matched today for a 10-rounder on the Jim Londos-Strangler Lewis heavyweight wrestling championship card, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune.

Let's crack this subject of car buying WIDE OPEN

...again we urge you "DON'T BUY ANY CAR TOO HURRIEDLY"

You experienced car buyers know how well it pays to look around, drive several makes of cars and compare before you sign an order.

Yet even you, if you aren't watchful, may find yourself lured by "super-salesmanship" into a buy that you may regret. You may find that, by looking a little further, you could have bought a good deal more for the same money.

That's why Hudson and Terraplane dealers say to you: "Don't buy any car too hurriedly." We want you to be sure you're right because then you're sure to be satisfied. And that's why the thousands of buyers of this year's Hudsons and Terraplanes are the most enthusiastic group of owners in Hudson's entire history. Can we prove that? Ask any one of them! They looked before they bought.

We will gladly give you facts about Hudson and Terraplane. Performance? We can show you the longest list of official AAA records held by any cars. Then you drive and judge for yourself. Ruggedness? Economy? Long life? You can see sworn affidavits of owners, and talk to as many as you like. Get facts like these, then get them about other cars—if you can.

Come in and let us help you get the facts you need before you decide.

My 1934 Terraplane has proven most satisfactory, both from an economical as well as from a serviceable standpoint. Its pep and durability are amazing. For hill climbing it has no superior. My utmost regards for the Terraplane. — W. W. THAWLEY, Stonehurst, Pa.

I tried several makes of cars and the one that was most appealing in every respect was the Hudson. Also, Hudson gives a lot more car for your money. — MRS. MAY HAINES, Buffalo, N. Y.

WE LOOKED AT THE OTHERS BEFORE WE BOUGHT

After a good many years of straddling suitcases and bundles, I feel like cheering every time I use that great big rear luggage compartment in my Terraplane. Even if it hadn't beaten all the other cars I looked at in every other way, that would still have sold me.—R. A. LITTLE, Pittsburgh, Pa.

I do a great many miles in my car and do them fast, and never yet has my Terraplane failed to respond when called upon. Further, your interest in my satisfaction has been unusual. —QUINN SHAUGHNESSY, Washington, D. C.

Seeded Players Reach Third Round in Annual Government Net Championships

McElvenny's Play Beats Erana

By John R. Vosburgh.

LAWYER RALPH McELVENNY argued his way into the fourth round of the annual Government tennis championships yesterday, using a potent racket to drive his points home convincingly and persuade Senor Mario Erana to depart from the tournament through the logic of a 9—7, 6—0 beating.

Lawyer McElvenny, who also is the defending champion, was confronted with considerable persuasion on the senor's part in the first set, but stormed the net to effectively stifle his opponent's opposition with sharp volleys, and went on to win the case in rather easy fashion.

Latona Also Advances.

Tony Latona, the No. 2 seeded star, who figures to be the youthful barrister's biggest obstacle to winning his second straight title, went to the third round on the wings of two straight-set victories.

The blond Georgetown athlete toppled Harold Weis, 6—0, 6—1, in the first round and Paul Eugenio, by identical scores in the second, giving every indication that he is undoubtedly McElvenny's greatest threat.

Other seeded players advanced without mishap, Frank Shore, seeded No. 3, defeating Gene Allan, 6—4, 6—3, and Hy Ritzenberg, No. 4, beating John Fox, 6—1, 6—0, both gaining the fourth round. Herb Shenkin, seeded fifth, did not play, having already gaine dthe fourth having already gained the fourth round, but Allan Staubley, seeded Treuthart, 6—0, 6—1.

Tourney Moves Along.

Yesterday's play completed all the second round matches and most of the third, the remaining engagements in the latter to be played off today.

McElvenny and Larry Philips, the defending champions, were seeded No. 2 in the doubles draw made last night, with Tony Latona and Frank Shore topping the list. The team play will start today.

Ritzenberg and Staubley were seeded third and John Ladd and Stan Haney, fourth. A field of 22 teams will compete.

In today's singles matches, Don Garber, seeded No. 7, meets Gardes and Harry Goldsmith, No. 8, meets Edwards, in third round frays. In the doubles, McElvenny and Philips clash with Wiley Glassmire and Felix Silva in one of the feature matches, while Shore and Latona face Tom Quinn and Phil Kennedy in another. Staubley and Ritzenberg play Ivan Edwards and Arthur Tomelden in another match involving a seeded team.

Pixlee Surveys Lean Squad At G.W.U.

Coach Must Build New Back Field; Drills Start Labor Day.

MATERIAL as a whole, and back-field men in particular, are scarce at George Washington this year, but Colonial followers don't have such a dreary picture when they contemplate the situation in the line.

Head Coach Jim Pixlee will have but 35 or 40 athletes on hand when training begins Labor Day at Camp Letts, Md., but among them will be 11 linemen who earned varsity letters last season, though 36 of them were not regarded as regulars.

The five returning line regulars are Capt.-elect Ed Clark and Harry Deming, tackles; Bill Parris and Arnold Benefield, ends, and Red Rathjen, center. This quintet, with the steller Zuzu Stewart and Boyd Hickman, a pair of the finest guards in Colonial gridiron history, wound up the 1933 season as starters.

Kolker Looks Promising.

In the other group Sid Kolker, former Tech High captain and all-high selection for two years, bears promise of developing into another Stewart or Hickman. An old knee injury hampered him somewhat last year, but he is now fully recovered. The other lettermen forwards remaining are Ozie Wray, Henry Vonder Bruegge and Bob Ferebauer, ends, and Henry Strayer and Hollis Harrison, guards.

Len Walsh, Pixlee's able line coach, believes that George Washington will give all of its ten opponents plenty of trouble on defense. "I can't say how our line will fare on beating back the opponents," Walsh said yesterday, "but I feel fairly certain the opponents will find it tough beating their way through G. W." And Walsh wasn't forgetting Louisiana State, Vanderbilt, Tulsa, Oklahoma and the other strong Colonial foes.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

SOLOMON, the Wise Man of Israel, said "There is a time and place for everything that is done under the sun," or words to that effect. He didn't have bluefish fishing in mind when he coined the saying, but it fits into our present fishing problems like "apples of gold in pitchers of silver."

Almost two months ago (June 13) this column protested against so much trout and bluefish talk that was being heaped upon the fishermen of this vicinity. This column said: "During September and October bluefish strike at anything, and that's when and where trolling comes in. Bluefish are then in the mood for this type of fishing."

Bluefish are interested in trolling now. They will take your lures if you are interested. They are breaking all over the bay. Chesapeake Bay is full of bluefish. Possibly a slight cold snap would bring them up much better.

School of Bluefish.

I was at Galesville, Md., Sunday afternoon. Still fishing was not very exciting. It hadn't been for a week or so. Capt. N. E. Dixon said his two sons, Sewell and George, took one of the boats Friday afternoon and ran into a school of bluefish in the mouth of West River, just out of Galesville. They landed 22 in about 2 hours. Then they chummed awhile and picked up 5 more.

Capt. Noah Hazard, also at Galesville, made a catch of 11,000 pounds of fish last Wednesday night in his trap nets. One thousand of them were large Norfolk spots. He said they were the largest he had ever seen. His total catch for the week was about 50,000 pounds, the best week he has had in his 20 years of fishing.

Joshua Thomas, whose nets are staked out near Blood Point, across the bay from Galesville, went out last Friday morning and hauled in 7,000 bull croakers. Capt. Noah Hazard said they were the kind fishermen speak of as being 5-pounders. They were all 2 and 3 pounders, and many of them would reach 4 pounds.

Croakers to Leave.

But the big croakers are getting ready to leave. They are schooling about, picking up stray members of the species. They will soon be making a hasty exit from our waters. But many of them will be caught in the lower part of the bay during the month of September.

Capt. Noah showed me a trolling arrangement some fisherman had given him. It was a regulation braided wire leader, a No. 2 spoon snapped to it, with two swivels next to the spoon. There were two swivels at the top, next to the sinker. He said the man who gave it to him said he landed 23 bluefish with it.

At Shady Side I talked with Capt. R. E. Lee. One of his boats came in while we were talking. Members of the party were P. Needle, D. Hartstall, N. Needle, B. Moore and Walter Cronin, all of Washington. They had finished Sunday afternoon on this side near Holland Point. Their catch was 43 croakers and 2 trout. B. Moore used three-fourths of the bait, lost 50 fish and landed 4. He made pictures of the catch, however, and the other fellows furnished the films.

Moon Is Responsible.

I asked Capt. Noah Hazard the reason for the large catches of trout, bluefish, croakers and spots in the nets. He said the abundance of water which always comes into the bay during the time of full moon is responsible. The fish get in a huddle at that time of the month and buck the line for a touchdown, so to speak.

In other words, they go on foraging expeditions, and on those expeditions they work in close formation. When a school passes a fishing party, everyone pulls in the fish. The school passes on and there is a lull. Then another school passes by and fish are caught. After the full moon the schools break up into many small groups. Still fishing is better until the next full moon.

Capt. R. E. Lee said Charlie Anderson, one of his boatmen, was out one day last week and landed 20 bluefish trolling near Poplar Island, across the bay. They were 4, 5 and 6-pounders.

At Herring Bay I talked with Capt. James Ward. Many of the boats had gone across the bay to Tilghman Island to attend the funeral of Capt. Ed Garvin, who died Friday from injuries received Thursday when his truck turned over. I spent a day and a night in Capt. Garvin's home, the Elms, late in May, 1933.

Call, West Va. Grid Star, Enters G. W.

Another promising young football prospect will enter George Washington University this fall in the person of James "Whitey" Call, of Clarksburg, W. Va. Young Call captained the Washington Irving High eleven of Clarksburg last season and for three years has been one of the leading quarter backs in West Virginia scholastic football.

Call is a triple-threat man as well as a field general, and earned honorable mention in two all-State football selections. He also played in the North-South championship game last year.

Richmond U. To Give Grid Bargain

School Children to See Three Regular Games for Quarter.

RICHMOND, Aug. 27 (AP). — A thin dime will buy for grammar and junior high school students a ticket to three of the six home football games on the University of Richmond schedule.

The plan is intended to insure better crowds and at the same time make the youth of the city "University of Richmond conscious."

Glenn Thistlethwaite, former "Big Ten" coach, who begins his duties at Richmond this fall, was enthusiastic over the plan. The same thing has been tried with marked success in the Midwest, he said.

In fact, as Dave Miller, graduate manager, pointed out, the 10-cent charge is normal. Some sort of fee would have to be charged, he said, to keep the stadium from being filled to overflowing. High school students will see the three special games for 25 cents.

These prices will be in force for the opening games with Roanoke College, September 29; Hampden-Sydney, October 27; and Davis and Elkins, November 10. Contracts with other teams which will play here during the year—V. M. I., October 20; Georgetown, November 3, and William and Mary, November 29, will not permit the special prices.

Prep Squads Invited.

The Roanoke game will be known as Kid's Day and the V. M. I. game as Homecoming Day.

All the prep school teams of the State will be invited to attend the Hampden-Sydney game as guests of the university.

Georgetown University will play in what will be known as Civic Clubs Day, when members of local civic clubs will be specially invited guests.

The Davis and Elkins game, to be played November 10, will be a part of the Armistice Day celebration, with the American Legion and Boy Scouts as guests of the day.

Mensel Limps Off Rye Court, Defaulting Match to McAuliff

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 27 (U.P.).—With the tournament's most dramatic figure—Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia—eliminated through a combination of Dr. Eugene McCauliff's skill and Menzel's lame leg, the Eastern grass-court tennis champions tonight became a purely domestic matter.

Menzel was trailing Dr. McCauliff, 4—6, 12—10, 4—0, when he defaulted and limped off the court, creating the biggest upset of the tournament and one of the outstanding reversals of the season. Dr. McCauliff hit one of his brilliant days and was stroking flawlessly.

Frank Shields, top-ranked American, moved into the round of sixteen, defeating Frank Bowden, of New York, late in the afternoon, 6—2, 6—1, quickly followed by Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, who beat Cliff Sutter, Bronxville, 6—3, 6—2.

George Lott, of Chicago, had trouble beating Hugh Lynch, of Princeton, 9—7, 7—5, going into the round of sixteen. Californians moved ahead as Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles, beat Armand Bruneau, of New York, and Don Budge, Oakland, Calif., red-head, trimmed Gil Hunt, of Washington, D. C., 6—0, 6—8, 11—9.

Frank Wilde, of England, playing against doctor's orders, beat Burt Boulware, of Miami, Fla., 2—6, 6—2, 6—3, and Vernon Kirby, of South Africa, trounced Sam Gilpin, of Philadelphia, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4.

In women's play Betty Nuthall beat Mary Jacoby, of New York, 6—2, 6—0, Elizabeth Ryan defaulted to Margaret Anderson, of Richmond, Va., and Kay Stammers defeated Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 7—5, 6—3. Freda James, fourth of the English group, beat Helen Murray, of Yonkers, 6—2, 6—0.

Anita Peabody, Star Filly, Dies

Infection Cost Life of 1927 Futurity Winner.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (AP). — Anita Peabody, winner of the $125,000 Belmont Futurity in 1927, died yesterday at Mrs. John D. Hertz's Leona Farm, it was learned here tonight.

Anita Peabody won numerous races as a 2-year-old, the most brilliant victory being a close decision over her stablemate, Reigh Count, in the 1927 Belmont Futurity. Uncertain legs slowed her down as a 3-year-old while Reigh Count went on to become the 3-year-old champion of 1928.

Anita Peabody and Reigh Count were mated, their offspring being Our Count, a good stake horse, and a 2-year-old, Our Reigh. Anita Peabody died from a general infection which started with a sore throat.

Legion Juniors Arriving.

Chicago (AP).—The Chicago White Sox are in favor of the American Legion's effort to promote interest in baseball among the juniors. Two players from the Legion's junior tournament ranks are reporting to the Sox next spring. They are Dan Hafey, nephew of Chick Hafey, of the Cincinnatti Reds, now playing with Oakand, and Lee Stine, Milwaukee pitcher.

3 Horses Barred After Saliva Tests

Canada Track Suspends Trainers for 30 Days.

Toronto, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Canadian Racing Association today suspended three trainers for 30 days and ruled three horses off the tracks of the organization as a result of saliva tests made at Hamilton and Stamford Park by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

J. A. Smith and Arthur Hullcoat were suspended for 30 days as from August 7, and M. McIvar for the same length of time as from August 4. The horses ruled off the tracks were Sir Byron, owned by R. E. Leslie and trained by Smith; Irish Vote, owned and trained by Hullcoat, and W. H. Wright's Sam Worthy, trained by McIvar. Hullcoat once trained Mate for A. C. Bostwick.

Each of the saliva tests indicated the horses had been "doped" with narcotics. Charges against five other trainers were preferred to the stewards of the Stamford track.

Post Nine Wins Alexandria Contest

Police Are Beaten, 3 to 1, in Commercial Loop Tie Play-Off.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—The Post nine won a bitterly contested game from the Police today, 3 to 1, in a Commercial League tie play-off. Red McMenniman hit a double to right center to send the winning run across.

McMenniman pitched a smart game for the winners and the six hits obtained by the Coppers were widely scattered, not more than one being granted per inning.

Losers Score in Fourth.

The one run scored by the losers came in the fourth. Kidwell singled off McMenniman's glove, advanced all the way to third on a passed ball and scored after the catch of Ludlow's fly to center.

The game was a thriller and one of the largest crowds of the season was on hand to witness the battle. Kidwell and Hamilton, Celtic teammates, led their respective clubs with the willow, each getting a pair of bingles.

Stocks Decline 1.2 Points in Dull Session

Decreased Demand Blamed for Drop; Sales Cut to 534,200 Shares.

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The stock market yielded some of its gains of last week in a moderate decline today.

Bullish traders continued to feel their way along cautiously in all markets. Reactionary tendencies embraced leading commodities but the dollar rallied and bonds about held their own.

The railroads' application for higher freight rates, a further decline in steel operations and the widening scope of the threatened textile strike contributed to the hesitant mood displayed in speculative quarters.

Decreased demand, rather than any important selling, made for lower stock prices. Volume dwindled to 534,200 shares, compared with 745,700 Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dropped 1.2 points to 74.5 after moving up more than 4 points last week.

Rails Are Leaders.

Rails, leaders of the upswing last week, sold off as Wall street digested the plea of the carriers for increased rates to absorb mounting costs. The rate application directed attention to railroad problems. So did several July earnings statements, showing substantial declines in net income compared with last year, as result of increased operating expenses.

Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, Northern Pacific and Union Pacific retreated 1 to 2 points. The first of the weekly carloading reports showed little change from the preceding week.

Steel shares gave ground grudgingly in face of production estimates that were the lowest since the banking holiday period in March, 1933. The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated output this week at 19.1 per cent of capacity, against 21.3 per cent a week ago, a new low since March, 1933.

American Rolling Mill, Bethlehem, Republic Steel and U. S. Steel common weakened, but losses at the finish were less than a point.

Cuban American Sugar preferred extended its gain a point as the market sought to appraise the effects of the Cuban trade treaty. The strongest group on the board was local traction issues, which apparently reflected rumors of impending unification developments. Interborough Rapid Transit, Manhattan Guaranteed, Third Avenue Railway and Brooklyn-Queens Transit scored gains of fractions to more than a point.

American Can, Johns Manville, Spiegel-May-Stern, U. S. Smelting and Alaska Juneau were among issues losing 1 to 2 points.

Inflationary Sentiment Fades.

Inflationary sentiment continued to fade as the dollar rose against foreign exchanges. It was assumed Washington would seek to discourage further inflation talk pending the Treasury's forthcoming refunding operations.

The business horizon was still bare of seasonal expansion evidence, although week-end trade reports encouraged fall hopes. The magazine Steel said that industry was looking for Labor Day to mark the turning point away from the seasonal decline. Elsewhere, hopes also were held out for an upturn next month, providing labor difficulties do not interfere.

Robey's Review

Importance of Reciprocal Trade Agreement With Cuba Rests Upon the Evidence It Provides of a Break in Recent Trend.

By Ralph West Robey.

Announcement over the week-end of the reciprocal trade pact with Cuba has a significance far beyond the immediate question of any gain in foreign trade that may result from it. This arises from the fact that this agreement is the first definitive step that this country has taken in years toward a rehabilitation of world commerce. It marks the start of a policy that affords the only feasible means for getting the world headed back to a condition in which nations may benefit from trading with each other.

As one thinks back over the developments of the last five years in the field of international trade, it is almost unbelievable that nations could have been quite so short-sighted. It has not been a question of believing or not believing in free trade. The issue is much broader than that. It is a problem of nations following policies that enable them to maintain the industrial organizations they had created and, through this, of enabling their peoples to continue to enjoy a reasonable standard of living.

Limits to Exploitation Have Not Been Recognized.

The short-sightedness of the policies has arisen from the failure of their sponsors to recognize that a country can not continue indefinitely to exploit foreign markets on balance. It has been assumed that what was good for the moment would be good for all time. It has been taken for granted that in the case of foreign trade it is not necessary, as it is in domestic trade, to have an exchange of goods, to be willing to buy as well as to sell.

In consequence policies have been followed that while of a character that temporarily should improve the international balance of the country, have had within themselves the seeds of their own destruction. An attempt has been made to increase the ability of the country to sell abroad, while at the same time undermining the ability of foreign nations to enter the domestic market.

At first these attempts were limited to the raising of tariff walls. In time, however, these proved to be inadequate. The nations then turned to detailed regulation of imports, to the establishment of allotments, of quotas, of embargoes, of depreciating currencies.

Restrictions Have Hurt Rather Than Helped Nations.

Instead of these efforts proving valuable, however, they have had just the reverse effect. They have further undermined the economies of the countries that resorted to them. For as soon as one nation has set up barriers against its competitors, the competitors themselves have retaliated in kind. It has been a losing game from the start. Even the temporary advantages that usually could be counted upon as reasonably certain have been lost by the promptness with which every move by one nation has been met by a comparable move on the part of other nations. It has been the greatest spree of international stalemating that the world has ever seen.

Our own record in all of this has been, all things considered, about as bad as that of any other nation. It is true that we have not indulged in embargoes and quotas, but through the raising of tariff rates under the previous Administration, and the devaluation of our currency by the present Administration, we have helped along the conditions that assured continued difficulties.

The trade pact with Cuba, while of little importance in the world of trade, is of vast importance as evidence that at last the trend of the last four years has been broken.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 84.5 Level

Rail and Federal Loans Turn Heavy; Sales Cut to $8,957,000.

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Renewed heaviness of U. S. Government securities and railroad loans was somewhat unsettling in today's bond market, where irregularity was the rule throughout the quiet session.

Transfers totaled only $8,957,000, par value, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues closed unchanged at 84.5.

The turnover in the Federal section amounted to about $3,540,000 and declined ranged from 1-32d to 11-32ds of a point. The selling in the Government division was attributed partly to uncertainty as to the Treasury's plans for its September-October financing.

$1,700,000,000 Involved.

The two operations will involve more than $1,700,000,000, but banking circles were generally of the opinion that orthodox methods would be used in the transactions.

The rails were said to have reflected the filing by the roads of a petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission asking for rate increases amounting to some $170,000,000. Disclosures in the petition of the precarious conditions confronting the transportation systems were not cheering the holders of carrier mortgages.

Losers of fractions to a point or more included some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, Chicago Great Western; St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Pere Marquette, Southern Pacific, Southern and Union Pacific. Cuban Railway bonds were again firm.

Utilities and Industrials.

Scattered utilities and industrials showed some improvement. Among these were bonds of American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Federal Light, Goodyear, Interboro Rapid Transit, Manhattan Railway, Manati Sugar, National Dairy, Portland General Electric, Remington Rand, Utilities Power & Light, U. S. Rubber and Western Union.

German obligations suffered a relapse following week-end reports from Berlin that Dr. Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, had said there was little hope of continuing the service of the Young and Dawes plan issues.

These two internationals dropped to record lows, but rallied later and were only off fractionally at the finish. The South Americans—including the Argentines, Colombians, Brazilians and Uruguayans—maintained a firm tone. The Australians lost about a point each.

Curb's Prices Suffer Setback In Dull Sales

First Decline Since Early Last Week; Transfers, 102,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The curb market today suffered its first setback since the uptrend which got underway early last week. Trading was dull throughout the session and price movements uncertain.

An easier tone prevailed shortly after the opening. Prices stiffened a trifle at the beginning of the last hour but support dwindled at the finish.

Gold shares were lower in sympathy with active selling in that group on the big board. Utilities ruled somewhat heavy in spots but oils were more resistant.

Bunker Hill & Sullivan and A. O. Smith lost around 2 points each. Shares closing off sizeable fractions, to around a point, included American Gas & Electric, Commonwealth Edison, Electric Bond & Share, Hiram Walker, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Swift Internacionale, Swift & Co., Newmont, International Petroleum, Hollinger Gold and Pioneer Gold. Aluminum Co. Limited was up a point, while Standard Oil of Indiana, Humble Oil and Sherwin Williams ended fairly steady.

U. S. Exports of Iron and Steel Jump to 233,186 Tons in July

(Associated Press.)

July exports of iron and steel products from the United States were reported by the Department of Commerce yesterday as 233,186 gross tons, an increase over June but smaller than the figures for the peak months of March and May.

For the first seven months of 1934, exports totaled 1,486,360 tons, about two and one-half times the 606,030 in the coresponding period a year ago.

The July exports compared with 219,406 tons in June, 241,753 in May and 261,269 in March.

Scrap exports were 155,812 tons, the second largest total ever recorded and exceeded only by the 173,165-ton trade in March. Of the scrap, 101,293 tons went to Japan, which continued as the leading buyer of American iron and steel products with a record total of 104,001 tons in July.

Tin plate exports, 13,960 tons, were smaller than in any of the first three months of 1934, although higher than in any of the second three.

Next to Japan, Canada had the second largest trade in July of 23,759 tons, followed by Italy, with 22,169 tons; Poland and Danzig, with 18,494 tons, and Mexico, with 9,404 tons.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

The dollar rallied vigorously against gold currencies yesterday as European speculators sought to cover short commitments in an apparently oversold market.

French francs tumbled .02 of a cent in New York to 6.67⅛ cents, well under the gold export point to Paris. The dollar closed the Paris trading at the equivalent of 6.67¼ cents to the franc.

The pound sterling held fairly steady in New York, losing only ⅛ of a cent at $5.06⅜, after the dollar had closed in London at 5.06 3-16 to the pound. The British currency also showed a steadier tone against French francs, closing at around 75.80 francs to the pound.

The price of gold in London dipped a penny to 139 shillings 4 pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $35,26), and bars valued at $2,100,418 changed hands.

Wheat Values Shrink Under Liquidation

Winnipeg Prices Forced Down; Rye, Oats and Barley Decline.

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Buying support in grains evaporated today under the weight of liquidation pressure and prices sagged, wheat and corn losing around 2 cents a bushel.

Easiness at Winnipeg, where hedging pressure forced prices down more than a cent, and warmer weather in many parts of the grain belt giving favorable conditions for harvesting were bearish factors.

Failure of the forecasted frost to develop in Iowa led to scattered selling in the corn pit and that grain abandoned its role as market leader, this in itself being a discouragement to bulls.

Wheat Price Tumbles.

Wheat tumbled 1½ to 2⅛ cents below Saturday's finish. At the close December new deliveries were near the day's bottom figures at 1.03@1.03⅛. September new sold at 1.02¼@1.02⅜ and May at 1.05@1.05⅛.

About half of last week's advance of corn futures was erased, the loss ranging from 1⅜ to 1⅞ cents a bushel. December options closed at 79 to 79⅛, virtually at the day's low. September sold at 77⅝ and May at 81⅞@82.

The trade was generally sluggish. Some of the selling was attributed by observers to profit takers, execution of stop-loss orders and possibly hedging operations.

Canadian Crop Report.

Wheat traders showed little response to a report the Canadian crop had experienced further deterioration in some sections because of recent frosts. One authority placed the prospective in the Dominion at 220,000,000 bushels, the lowest forecast made thus far and comparing with last year's harvest of 251,000,000 bushels.

The weather in general also was virtually ignored. Temperatures moderated, but no moisture of any consequence was reported from any part of the grain belt. A forecast of probable frost in the Dakotas and Minnesota tonight received little attention.

Oats were ½ to ¾ lower, rye was 1⅜ to 1½ down and barley showed a range of 1¼ down to ¼ up.

Lard prices averaged higher, the continued bullish hog situation stimulating a fairly general demand. Clear bellies were dull but firm.

Canada Charters Silver Exchange

Montreal to Be Only Place for White Metal Trading in America.

Montreal, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Montreal Silver Exchange, established for the purpose of providing a market for spot and future contracts in silver, has been granted a charter by the Province of Quebec.

D. S. McMaster, chairman of the Montreal Stock Exchange, announced that trading will be started just as quickly as the necessary formality can be complied with.

The Montreal Silver Exchange, it was said, will be the only place for trading in spot and future contracts for silver on the North American Continent. All trading of silver in New York was indefinitely suspended earlier this month when the United States Administration announced the nationalization of silver.

Steel Plants Expect Revival After Holiday

Improvement in Orders Seen; Operation Rate Down to 20½.

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—Labor Day is approached by the steel industry with expectations that it will mark the turning point in the seasonal slump in the markets, states the magazine Steel.

With prices now reaffirmed for the fourth quarter and books for that period to be opened September 1, the belief is strong that the coming month will bring considerable improvement, in spot orders for completing present manufacturing programs, and in contracting for fall requirements.

Currently, the markets reflect only the urge toward further public construction work, 36,000 tons of structural and reinforcing steel being placed during the week, mainly for Federal and municipal projects.

Award of Naval Vessels.

Washington's apparent eagerness to expedite construction was indicated when 11 naval vessels were awarded to private yards and 13 to navy yards, within a week—a record time—from the opening of bids. On inquiries from the private yards, which will require 35,000 tons of steel, steelmakers evidently bid the open market prices, regardless of the fact that delivery will be extended over two years. Navy yards will take bids in September on 25,000 tons of steel for their allotment.

The automobile industry—always buying some steel—has increased specifications moderately, enabling some sheet and strip mills recently idle to resume production. Extensive shutdowns by automobile manufacturers over Labor Day is indicated, with the Ford suspension last Friday as the forerunner.

In view of business uncertainties, automobile manufacturers are postponing a start on new models, in the meantime making an effort to stimulate current markets and planning to produce such cars as they can sell. Desultory schedules are outlined for the industry in September.

Rail Equipment Outlook.

Retrenchment in railroad purchases has been noted ever since the passage of the railroad employes' retirement pension bill. The only new equipment buying in prospect is that of some streamlined, passenger trains. Lehigh Valley is seeking a Federal loan to repair 2,500 freight cars.

All the rails purchased with Government loans have now been rolled and rail mill schedules are down sharply, and are to be suspended in the Chicago district early in September. Dominion Steel & Coal Corporation, Sydney, N. S., has booked 7,500 tons of rails for South Africa. The Canadian government is projecting plans for financing equipment orders by the Dominion railroads.

Standard Oil Co. of California has entered the market for 2,500 to 5,000 tons of plates for tanks. New York has purchased 3,400 tons of cast pipe and Chicago 2,228 tons. Included in the heavy finished steel awards were 17,228 tons of reinforcing bars for a Government dam at Boneville, Oreg., and five Pacific Coast bridges; 3,000 tons of bars for Columbus, Ohio, and 2,600 tons for Cleveland. Structural shape awards, 10,670 tons, compared with 12,692 tons in the preceding week.

Government's Cattle Buying.

Government buying of cattle for a canning program has not developed in volume, and tin plate production is scheduled to be reduced 10 points to 40 per cent this week. Under the international tin plate sales agreement, just signed, Wales is allotted 55 per cent of the world's market tonnage; United States, 22 per cent; Germany, 16, and Italy and France the remainder.

Foundry coke shipments, heavier in August than in either July or June, indicate pig iron consumption has held up much better than production or shipments. The movement of scrap fails to display any marked significance, a reduction of 50 cents on substantial purchases in the East reducing Steel's iron and steel scrap composite 13 cents to $9.83.

Iron and steel exports in July increased to 233,186 tons from 219,406 tons in June. In July last year they were 83,311 tons. Exports in seven months total 1,486,360 tons, compared with 654,061 in the first seven months of 1933.

Steelworks operations were down 1 point to 20½ per cent last week. At Pittsburgh the rate was off 5 points to 10 per cent; eastern Pennsylvania, ½ point to 20; Youngstown, 1 to 21. Chicago advanced 1½ to 29½; Cleveland, 3 to 15. Detroit was unchanged at 77; New England, 29; Wheeling, 26; Buffalo, 23½; Birmingham, 25.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is off 1 cent to $32.22, while the finished steel index is unchanged at $54.

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimates steel ingot production during the current week at 19.1 per cent of capacity, a decline of 2.2 points, or 10.3 per cent from the 21.3 per cent at which steel mills operated last week. A month ago production was at the rate of 26.1 per cent.

The current figures are the lowest since the institute began compiling production statistics on a weekly basis last fall.

Loew's List of New Season Product Assures Capital Cream of Total Film Crop

Four of Major Producers Are Under Contract

By Nelson B. Bell.

Pursuant to seasonal custom, announcement is made by Divisional Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., of an elaborate list of screen attractions to be presented in Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters during the impending season.

Feature product of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century, Fox and a portion of Paramount, four of the foremost producing organizations in the motion picture industry, will be presented under the Loew banner.

Already the "greater movie season" for Loew's has been inaugurated locally by the world premiere presentation of Robert Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan in "Hideout;" Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore and Lewis S. Stone in "Treasure Island" and Jean Harlow in "The Girl From Missouri."

Next week will continue the procession of new-season releases, beginning Friday, with Joan Crawford and Clark Gable in "Chained," at the Palace, and Lee Tracy, Helen Morgan and Helen Mack in "You Belong to Me," at Loew's Fox. In this latter subject, Washington audiences will make the acquaintance of Master David Holt, described in the advance notices as the "male Shirley Temple."

Coming Later.

For later weeks, the Loew theaters will draft from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer such productions as "The Barretts of Wimpole Street", with Norma Shearer, Frederic March and Charles Laughton, adapted, of course, from the Adolf Besier play in which Katharine Cornell scored such a sensational success on the stage; Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald in "The Merry Widow" and Greta Garbo and George Brent in "The Painted Veil."

In production, with some as far along as the cutting room, are Constance Bennett and Herbert Marshall in "The Outcast Lady," an expurgated version of Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat;" Robert Montgomery and Ann Harding in what was originally S. N. Behrman's "Biography," then "Biography of a Bachelor' and now "Biography of a Bachelor Girl," and Helen Hayes, with Brian Aherne—who was Miss Cornell's leading man in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," by the way—in "What Every Woman Knows," by Sir James M. Barrie.

United Artists, which means Twentieth Century also, has an imposing lineup, led by Constance Bennett, Frederic March and Frank Morgan in "The Affairs of Cellini." Others from this source will be George Arliss in "The Last Gentleman;" Anna Sten and Frederic March in "We Live Again," adapted from Tolstoy's "Resurrection;" Tom Keene and Karen Morley in "Our Daily Bread," an epic of the soil, directed by King Vidor, and Eddie Cantor's "Kid Millions."

Fox and Paramount on Job.

Will Rogers will shortly be along from the Fox lot in "Judge Priest," by Irvin S. Cobb, and Harold Lloyd from the same studio in Clarence Buddington Kelland's "The Cat's Paw," the first picture he has made in over two years and reputedly one of his best. Fox also will have "Music in the Air," from the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein II operetta, with Gloria Swanson, John Boles and Douglass Montgomery, and "Servants' Entrance," co-starring Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres.

Paramount will offer Cecil B. De Mille's "Cleopatra," with Claudette Colbert; Pauline Lord in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch;" Joe Penner in "College Rhythm;" Loretta Young and Charles Boyer in "Caravan;" Maxine Doyle, Charles Butterworth, Jimmy Durante and Monte Blue in "Student Tour," "Death on the Diamond," and "Have a Heart."

Additional United Artists releases will be "Congo Raid" and "The Count of Monte Cristo."

This and announcements already published from other first-run interests insures Washington a practically 100 per cent coverage of the finest motion-picture releases produced in Hollywood, both for downtown and residential consumption.

Col. James J. Lake, Beau Brummel of Ninth street and Chesterfield of the sports arenas, beats the gun in his capacity as burlesque's solitary entrepreneur in the National Capital, by announcing the opening of the Gayety Theater's season of 1934-35 on next Sabbath afternoon. The first attraction of the new season of refurbished burlesque will be "Spices of 1935," an Independent Burlesque Association production, boasting a fine cast of principals and a beauty chorus of 16. This is the first offering of the newly formed organization of which Col. Lake is vice president and general adviser on productional matters. The Association is pledged to the presentation of bigger and better burlesque shows, with particular stress upon entertainment value instead of cutaneous display—although there will be some of that, too.

Dave Gould's Dances.

When Dave Gould, dance director, responsible for the staging of the terpsichorean interludes in all of the musical films released by RKO-Radio, was in Washington a week or so ago, he had quite a bit to say concerning the unusual qualities incorporated in the featured dances in two new Radio pictures—"Down to Their Last Yacht" and "The Gay Divorce."

Come Friday, we will have an opportunity to check up on the native son in so far as "Down to Their Last Yacht" is concerned. That is the Labor Day week feature at RKO-Keith's Theater.

64—Count 'Em—Dancing Gals.

The dance upon which particular emphasis is laid in this "mad musical" is "The South Sea Bolero," based on the familiar Spanish "Bolero"—not necessarily Ravel's—embellished with a few barbaric rhythms supposed to be indigenous to the islands of the tropical seas. It is performed by 64 ravishing young women, stained an appropriate walnut hue to simulate the natives of the hot countries.

Music for Mr. Gould's gift to the Polynesians was written by Ann Ronell, responsible for "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?"

All right, Mr. Meakin, bring on your beautiful dancing girls and let's see what Dave's really got, if anything!

And how's about "The Gay Divorce," in which Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers do "The Continental"—no dates, yet?

America's undefeated soft-shoe dancing champion, Lulu Beeson, who won the title 31 years ago in New York City, has a minor role in "You Belong to Me," in which Lee Tracy, Helen Morgan, Helen Mack and the amazing Master David Holt will be seen on the screen of Loew's Fox Theater, beginning Friday. Declared by newspaper critics of New York to be the best soft-shoe dancer in the American theater, 'way back in 1903, Miss Beson is believed to be the only woman ever to appear in a specialty with McIntyre and Heath, dean of blackface comedians. She was featured with them in "Hello, Alexander," in 1920.

Death Outspeeds Plane.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., was summoned to California Sunday night by the critical illness of his aged mother, who died yesterday morning, while he and his brother, Maj. Albert Warner, vice president of the film company, were en route to the West Coast by specially chartered plane. This information was received yesterday by the local Warner executives.

At the luncheon to be held today in the Hotel Mayflower for purposes of previewing the first four releases in the "See America First" series, at which H. M. Warner was to have been a guest of honor, along with E. M. Newman, travel-talker, and John B. Kennedy, he will be represented by Sam Sax, in charge of Eastern production for the Warners.

Distinguished Guests.

Among those who will be present at the luncheon and preview are:

Straight From the Studios

There Is Plenty to Worry About Here and in Europe; True Love, It Seems, Never Runs Smoothly; Gossip From the Gelatin Capital.

By Speed Kendall.

Hollywood, Aug. 27.—There's the story about Anna Sten writing her mother and sister in Germany. She was worried about their welfare because of all the recent political turmoil.

DOLORES DEL RIO.

But Miss Sten's mother sent a letter right back inquiring about her welfare. She had read in the papers about strikes, droughts, accidents, fires, &c., and was worried about her daughter's safety.

Another Film Colony.

A film colony in every sense of the word. Jack Conway, the director, owns several hundred acres of land at Palos Verdes, facing the ocean.

His idea, which will take form soon, is to subdivide this land into small parcels and sell them to his friends for home sites. Then a recreation center to while away the time in very exclusive surroundings is projected.

Too Bad About Love.

True love never runs smooth.

Director William Seiter attests to this. He is honeymooning with his bride of a few days, Marian Nixon.

The first thing to happen was Sunday's storm, which wasn't any too pleasant aboard his yacht, Cielito II, which means in Spanish, so I am told, "Little Bit of Heaven."

And then yesterday came the grand climax. Radio executives sent a messenger with word that he would have to be back at the studio for retakes immediately on "The Richest Girl in the World."

Such is love and romance in Hollywood.

Odd and Interesting People and Events.

The newlyweds, Eddie Buzzell and Sara Clark, were feted at dinner at the Miramar supper room, and Orchestra Leader Kay Kyser played an appropriate tune. Others noted were June Knight and Paul Ames and Bruce Cabot with a large party.

Judith Allen has changed her hair to Roman gold (light red), and the man she is seen places with is Sam Wolf, attorney.

Lyle Talbot entertained with a buffet supper and invited a few of his many girl friends.

This attraction between Gordon Westcott and Maxine Doyle is more serious than they want people to believe.

Juvenile romance to be watched is the one featuring Ben Alexander and Phyllis Fraser, niece of Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers. Ben will have a front seat when Mrs. Rogers reopens the Hollytown Theater Friday. Miss Fraser will play the ingenue lead in "Man of Ideas."

Ray Fox, who played at the old Montmartre cafe here in its best days, is a sensation with his band in London.

Germans Rally Spartan Spirit For Lean Days

(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press.)

Berlin, Aug. 27.—Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbels tonight geared his vast propaganda machine to the job of steeling Nazi Germany for the approaching winter's hardships.

With grave, possibly critical, economic difficulties just around the corner, the dynamic minister set himself the herculean task of popularizing self-sacrifice and glorifying "going without."

A sort of Spartan patriotism was the keyword for the big drive, prefaced as it has been by oratorical barrages on many Nazi fronts.

The lack of raw materials and the facilities with which to buy them were already nibbling at industrial Germany's vitals as Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in his address at Coblenz yesterday urged his people to meet suffering with noble patriotism and German defiance.

No Surrender Is Pledge.

"The greater the distress," he declared, "the greater will be our defiance and our determination. * * * In spite of everything we will overcome it.

"Under no conditions will we surrender," the Nazi leader asserted.

Characteristically, the campaign to harden National endurance in its present stage ascribes the seriousness of the economic situation to two causes, neither the fault of Hitler. They are:

1. The blunders of Hitler's predecessors in power.

2. International hostility toward the new Germany.

Goebbels is expected in the future to attempt to envelop suffering in an aura of romance, stressing the sufferings of Germany's great heroes of past centuries and attempting to spread widely the conviction that hardship patriotically borne is more precious than prosperity.

Pinch Yet to Come.

Some observers of Germany's economic development under Hitler believe that it will be at least six months before the economic pinch begins to be felt by the average German.

By that time, they suggest, Goebbels' propaganda may have made Germans capable of glorying in hardship at the same time that workers in other countries are reacting impatiently to milder distress.

This distress abroad has been accentuated in some sections, incidentally, by Germany's withdrawal as buyer of such foreign commodities as Manchester's yarns, Sweden's ores, California's dried fruits and walnuts, Louisiana's cotton, Arizona's copper, Virginia's tobacco, Brazil's coffee and the like.

Trapped by Fire, Lad and Sister Escape by Tree

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (Spl.).—A tree provided an impromptu fire escape today for a young man and his sister, trapped on the second floor of a blazing house at Dundalk, Baltimore County.

Charles Getz, 19, and his sister, Mrs. Marie Wetherington, 23, were awakened by their aunt, Mrs. Marie Harris, who told them the house was on fire. The three climbed to a porch roof and Getz leaped to the branches of a tree growing about 6 feet from the porch. Mrs. Wetherington likewise leaped, and clung to the tree limb.

Firemen raised a ladder and rescued her from the tree, then took her to a hospital for injuries to her back. Mrs. Harris was rescued from the porch roof by the firemen.

Hopi Tribes Dance, Whites Pray But Rain Fails Blistered States

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 27 (AP).—The prayers of Idaho residents and the snake dances and supplications of Hopi Indians of the Arizona mesas failed to bring rain to those areas today. A blazing sun again had its way with parched crops in the South and fire dotted timber lands in the Northwest.

By proclamation of their Governor, thousands of Idahoans prayed in their churches Sunday as the Hopi Indians danced over arid Arizona mesas in propitiatory gestures designed to bring showers. Today the Hopis said individual prayers for rain.

Showers fell in New Mexico, Arizona and other sections, but the dancers' mesas still were dust-covered and the Northwest fire area was so dry that additional forest gates were closed to outsiders.

Gov. C. Ben Ross of Idaho, however, was not discouraged.

"It depends upon how insistent the people were in asking it," he said, as he read predictions for cloudy weather in southeast Idaho and indications of continued cloudless skies and high temperatures in the North.

The Hopi priests were nonplussed when rain fell elsewhere than on the mesas upon which they chanted. Every formula that in other days had brought showers was followed. The most venomous rattlers, thought to be favorites of the gods, were brought out, and the braves danced with renewed vigor. The skies were clear when they stopped, half exhausted.

The Rev. R. B. Damron, of Boise, Idaho, a Congregationalist, thinks he knows why the prayers were not answered immediately.

"Before we pray for rain," he counseled, "let us ask God to forgive those who destroyed, or caused to be destroyed, plant and animal life while many in our country were hungry. Let us pray for enough common sense and religion to help us place human beings before rising profits."

Couch Is Host To RFC Force; Bids Farewell

1,400 Guests on Boat as Chief Retires to Arkansas Home.

Under a lopsided golden moon 1,400 people sailed down the Potomac River last night on the steamer City of Washington, bidding good-by to Harvey C. Couch, resigning Reconstruction Finance Corporation director.

On the boat, jammed hilariously together, were fellow Arkansans and employes of the RFC, united to pay a gay farewell tribute to Mr. Couch, who chartered the boat.

Mr. Couch observed his fifty-seventh birthday August 21. The Arkansas State Society wanted to give him a river excursion on that date. He said, "I'll give the party myself and also ask the RFC people to it."

So last night the group, anxious to be present at the farewell fete, packed the boat and the wharves long before the sailing hour.

The retiring director was eulogized by Charles Hillman Brough, former Governor of Arkansas, as "an outstanding citizen, successful in manifold activities, and one who has rendered inestimable service to his country and his Commonwealth," in the feature address of an extensive program during the boat ride.

"It is hard to say goodbye," responded Mr. Couch, "particularly to you who have worked so long in our fight against the depression. I have never seen a finer lot of people who have worked better together or who have done a better job. Public appreciation of what you have done is sure to be yours for years to come.

"I am leaving you to go back home to my own family, my own business, and my own organization, the only one as good as the RFC."

Although also famous as a fisherman and hog-caller in Arkansas, Mr. Couch denied before the voyage began that either of these sports would be part of the evening's program, although he freely admitted his proficiency in both.

The program was planned by Mr. Couch's secretary, Amy Hughes Eaton, and his administrative assistant, Sam Hardin. Its highlight was a burlesque quartet, consisting of the not-so-very-dignified RFC directors—Jesse H. Jones, Frederic H. Taber, Charles B. Henderson and Mr. Couch—who had prepared to torture their employes' ears for ten minutes with sentimental ballads.

The three-hour cruise began at 8:45 p. m., with unlucky late-comers struggling for entrance at the piergates, and listening enviously to the strains of "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," as the great boat, decks crammed to the rails with happy party-goers, slid down the river.

Two Identify Gang Suspect In Theft Here

Man Taken in Raid Is Pointed Out; Texas Trio Held.

Victims of two recent holdups last night identified Charles Back, 22, one of a gang who was arrested Sunday in Anacostia as the man who robbed them at pistol point.

Back, who escaped August 11 from Lorton Reformatory, was identified as the man who held up a desk clerk in the Plaza Hotel on Friday and robbed him of $100. He was also pointed out by Sam Hawis, of 501 C street northeast, as the man who robbed him of $100 on August 18 in a holdup of his delicatessen store.

Back was one of four men and three women arrested Sunday when police raided a house near Nichols avenue and Talbert street southeast. The police were called after one of the women had run from the house screaming after gun-play had been threatened. The police found several pistols and a sawed-off shotgun in the place.

Harry Lee Berry, a soldier stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and Myrtle E. Moy, 24; Marie F. Burke, 23, both of Baltimore, and Thelma Casg, of the 1200 block of Talbert street southeast, who were arrested in the raid, were ordered released. Police are still holding John Ciccione, 25, of New York, and Alfred M. Ciuffreda, who rents the apartment, where the arrests were made.

Three heavily armed Texans who were arrested here Saturday are being held for Texas authorities. Robert L. Anderson, 21, is wanted in Waco for kidnaping, jail-breaking and highway robbery. The others are: Linden F. Bogle, 21, and Roy J. Moreland, 25, both of Fort Worth. They will be questioned by Texas authorities.

College Is Improved At Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—Public improvement projects being conducted at the State Teachers College at Fredericksburg include construction of new dormitory facilities, an outdoor swimming pool, and widening of the campus walks and drives.

The swimming pool will be ready for use when the college opens September 24 for the fall quarter. Occupancy of the dormitories will be effected by December 1.

Old Sweet Springs Seeks Orphanage

3,500 Attend Meeting to Aid Movement.

Old Sweet Springs, W. Va., Aug. 27 (Spl.).—About 3,500 persons gathered at Old Sweet Springs yesterday for the opening of the campaign to establish a National home at the springs for children of deceased members of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Following dinner at the Hotel Jefferson, the guests were welcomed by Judge Howell M. Tanner, of Bluefield. Kyle McCormick, of Princeton, gave a sketch of the springs. Hugh I. Shott, Bluefield publisher and former member of Congress, stressed the importance of the American home movement. State Senator John Key, of Bluefield, urged the members present to lend their support to the movement. T. H. Scott, dictator of the Bluefield Lodge, was master of ceremonies.

Miss Frances R. Dial, daughter of M. B. Dial, of Washington, former Senator from South Carolina, was official hostess, assisted by Miss Martha Kraft, of Clifton Forge, Va.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
(Trade-mark Applied For)

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

DR. FLORENCE E. MEIER, of the Smithsonian Institution, is exploring an almost unknown field in the science of life—she is studying the relationship of radiation of various wave lengths to the living cell.

Miss Meier has determined that some wave lengths of ultraviolet light are more deadly to algae than others whose wave length varies but a few ten-millionths of a millimeter. She says:

"The lethal response of the algae to ultraviolet rays may be considered from two points of view—as to the radiotoxic sensitivity and the radiotoxic virulence. To make this clear by analogy, let the behavior of the algae with respect to three different ultraviolet rays be compared to a human being toward three poisons, radium in watch face paint, cyanide of potassium and rattlesnake venom.

"With respect to sensitivity, each one of the three poisons is fatal if administered in sufficient dose. Probably in order of minimum lethal dosage or sensitivity they would rank: Radium, cyanide, snake venom. But in order of toxic virulence, or the time required to kill, they would rank differently: Cyanide, snake venom, radium.

Ticks take up most of the space in the rogues' gallery, where Dr. F. C. Bishopp, entomologist in the Department of Agriculture, files his records on insects convicted of crimes against humanity.

Many of these criminals have been proved guilty of carrying deadly diseases, such as rabbit fever, to human beings as well as of carrying diseases of live stock and to say nothing of spreading disease among wild animals.

Most notorious, says Dr. Bishopp, are the common wood ticks which spread Rocky Mountain spotted fever, which in the past few years has spread into the East. To find a way to combat this menace to public health, entomologists are studying tick habits in all parts of the country.

Ku Klux Klan Drive Opened To Oust Long

Membership of 38,000 in Louisiana Claimed by Organization.

Atlanta, Aug. 27 (AP).—The campaign of the Ku Klux Klan to unseat Senator Huey Long was reported well under way today, under direction of Louisiana klan officers, but with advice and suggestions concerning the "method of operation" from National headquarters of the organization here.

Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the plan, recently called the "Kingfish" a "menace to organized society" and promised to bring about his defeat at the polls. The Senator met this threat with another to send Dr. Evans out of the State "with his toes turned up" if he should ever set foot on Louisiana soil.

"When Louisiana klansmen decide they need a visit from the imperial wizard, he will come," one of Dr. Evans' associates said.

"His own people of Louisiana know him even better than the National organization of the klan and we think we know enough of him.

"There is nothing personal in the klan's attack on Senator Long. The klan does not think he carries either the dignity or ability to properly represent Louisiana."

The klan's fight against the Senator is being carried on by 85 Louisiana lodges with a membership of approximately 38,000, one headquarters spokesman said.

New Orleans Probe Group Completed

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 27 (AP).—Senator Huey P. Long's legislative committee was ready today to jump into a preelection investigation of the city government of New Orleans, political "kingdom" of Long's bitter enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

The self-styled Louisiana "Kingfish" and recently labeled dictator, sat placidly in the Governor's office today as the lieutenant governor, John B. Fournet, announced the appointment of a Senate committee to help an already named House committee make the inquiry.

"The first thing the committee should do," Long said as he sat in Gov. O. K. Allen's chair, "is look into the bank accounts, bank boxes and the personal fortunes of the public officials in New Orleans."

"The first thing the committee should do," Long said as he sat in Gov. O. K. Allen's chair, "is look into the bank accounts, bank boxes and the personal fortunes of the public officials in New Orleans."

Raid Nets $10,000 In Hijacked Goods

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—Merchandise valued at $10,000 was seized by a squad of Philadelphia and Baltimore detectives in a surprise raid today on an auction warehouse here.

The goods were said by the raiders to have been stolen during the last several months by a gang of hijackers operating out of Philadelphia. It included 12,500 cigars, cartons of cigarettes, bolts of cloth, cans of oil and grease and automobile tires, allegedly taken from railroad freight cars and transportation trucks.

A man identified as Herman Cohen, alias "Eggy" Cohen of Philadelphia was arrested. He was held for Federal authorities, as hijacking of inter-State trucks is a Federal offense. Four other members of the gang were said to be under arrest in Philadelphia.

Walt Mason, Himself

In Vienna.

In old Vienna, since that day when locoed skates went forth to slay a cheap grand duke, who wasn't worth the space he occupied in earth, there's been no rest from sturm and drang, from plot and noise and loud harangue. There's been no peace where peace once reigned quite unmolested, unrestrained. Vienna, famed in countless books! There once the world's efficient cooks assembled and provided things that gained the loud applause of kings. There one could get so fine a meal that rapture through his heart would steal, and he'd remember till he died the leg of lamb, the oysters fried, the coffee's aromatic flow, such nectar as the gods might know. Where are those gifted cooks today? They've gone, alas, the darkened way as exiles to those outer lands, where cooks are merely extra hands; and in the place where once they stewed rich fodder for the multitude a lot of noisy skates are seen, with khaki shirts and helmets green, who look around for some good chance to prod a neighbor with a lance, or push a long and rusty spear through some chaste pious auctioneer. There once the noblest music rolled, and orchestras in tones of gold produced the masters' noblest strains, but no sweet music now remains. Instead you hear the raucous voice of one who bids the crowds rejoice, because one mob with shirts of tan has been extinguished to a man, and t'other mob, with yellow shirts, has jumped the jobs of all those squirts.

IKE, I WANT YOU TO STOP LISTENING TO GEORGE SO MUCH. YOUR MIND ISN'T ANY TOO STRONG ANYHOW, AND EVERY TIME HE TALKS YOU GET...WELL, LIKE HE IS.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin; Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, founder of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War, and Dorothy Thompson, wife of the novelist, Sinclair Lewis, have been scheduled to address the New York Herald Tribune's fourth annual conference on current problems to be held in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, September 26 and 27.

This year's conference will deal in general with "Changing Standards" and its five sessions will be devoted to detailed consideration of change in the fields of crime prevention, the fine arts, vocational opportunities for youth, the status of women and National and personal security.

Mrs. Roosevelt will open the conference and Dr. Frank will deliver the keynote address, "America at the Crossroads."

Crime and the Federal Government's part in the apprehension of criminals will concern the first session. Speakers at this session will include Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University; Austin H. MacCormick, New York commissioner of correction; Julia Caffray, secretary of the National committee on prisons and prison labor, and Joseph C. Fennelly, National Youth Movement leader.

Writers, artists and critics will describe changing standards of the arts during the second session, and the third session will treat of opportunities for youth in specific fields. Pearl Buck, Will Irwin, Clifton Fadiman and Hugh Walpole will be heard in the second session.

The third session will be handled by Dr. Neil Carothers, professor of economics and director of the College of Business Administration at Lehigh University; Dr. Paul Henry Nystrom, Columbia University professor of marketing; Deane W. Malott, Harvard University business school professor; Col. Henry Breckenridge and Amelia Earhart.

Lady Rhondda will speak from London via radio, M. Paul Dupuy, French newspaper publisher, from Paris, and Frau Mathilde Wurm, former member of the German Reichstag, from London where she is a political exile, during the fourth session on the economic and cultural position of women. The session will be keynoted by Dorothy Thompson with a talk on "The Changing Status of Women."

Miss Perkins, Mrs. Catt and Dr. Stanley King, president of Amherst College, will be the principal speakers during the final session the night of September 27. "The Fight for Security" will be the general topic.

Invitations to the conference have been sent to leaders of women's clubs, schools and colleges for women and organizations interested in crime prevention, education and social service. Three thousand delegates representing 1,800 organizations attended each of the conference sessions in 1933.

Bankrupt Road Ready to Quit

Permission to abandon its railway lines, running from Thrifton to Great Falls, in Virginia, was sought of the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by the Washington & Old Dominion Railway.

The company, now in receivership, pointed out in its petition that it already had given up its passenger business and now is hauling freight only. Revenues from that source have totaled only $465 for 1932 and 1933.

The road has conducted no interstate passenger business for a decade and on June 9 the Corporation Commission of Virginia assented to abandonment of all interstate operations, leaving the interstate freight business as the sole revenue producing item.

Receivers now operating the line said the little freight carrying that was done was only brought in through connections with the B. & O., the R. F. & P., the Pennsylvania, and the C. & O., at the Potomac Yards, and with the Southern Railway at Alexandria.

The company informed the commission that the receivers were powerless to suspend the freight operations unless authority for the abandonment was granted. Until that time, the receivers will have to continue the operation of the line.

Trip Home Halts For 25 Days; John Again in His Cell

John Richardson, colored, was arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Police Court yesterday. He was charged with intoxication.

"Were you ever arrested before," he was asked.

"Yes, your honor, and I haven't had a chance to get home since."

"Why not?"

"I just got out of jail and was on my way home when a policeman locked me up again."

Amid laughter of courtroom spectators, Richardson was sent back to jail for 25 days.
